Surprises for Washington.

Government and Railroads.

London Wants Us In.

Singing Too Soon.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

THIS IS Washington's birthday, and the father of his country would be surprised if he could wander from his monument around to the front of the White House and with his psychic eye perceive the invisible reception committee that sits waiting for the new President.

There is prohibition, with crime on one side, graft on the other; and the foreign debt problem, with little repudiation sitting in its lap. Unemployment leads a discouraged army of twelve million men, while taxation with the big shears is busy snipping off any profits that may be left, a gruesome committee.

Washington, who established independence in a country with fewer than four million people, would ask himself:

"Are these 123,000,000 really Americans? If so, what has happened to them?

PROHIBITION and repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment represent the immediate home news. Some dripping wet states are in a race as to which shall be first in the repeal ranks. New York State hopes for the honor and has already set the machinery going.

Dry states will fight repeal. Only 13 states are needed to defeat it. Mrs. Peabody, very dry lady, says there will be a new party. There was a prohibition party, not successful. Bishop Cannon, who had some discussion in connection with the Alfred E. Smith campaign, says half the nation is against repeal. The states will decide.

IN A LETTER to the Senate Finance Committee William Randolph Hearst suggests:

"If the people's money is being paid out in sufficient quantities to buy the railroads, then the people should own the railroads, and secure the full benefit that would accrue from government refinancing, government reorganization, government unification and government operation."

Many savings banks, insurance companies and other institutions well supplied with government bonds will say amen to that, at least privately.

LONDON INSISTS on talking about what "Britain and the United States could do against Japan in case of conflict," and London says, solemnly:

"There is some doubt as to the ability of the combined British and American navies to crush Japan quickly."

The British even say that THEY could not do much, but they could and would let the United States use British naval bases, including Singapore.

How very kind.

Franklin D. Roosevelt will doubtless let the British know that this country doesn't intend to pull any League of Nations chestnuts out of the fire.

HOW SOON we forget! A group of 200 Hitlerite Nazis, dressed in brown shirts, imitating Mussolini's Black Shirts, celebrate on the French bridge across the Rhine, at Huningue, on the border. Marching to the middle of the bridge they sing "Deutschland Ueber Alles," "Germany Over All."

France knows that Germany will not stay down forever and that another "revenge war" will come unless nations become suddenly and abnormally wise, which they will not do.

However, before singing that song too loudly, especially on French bridges, Nazis should make sure that they have, or can immediately improvise, a fighting air fleet superior to that of the French.

HITLER, AS you know, favors the Hohenzollerns and fights German Catholics, having transferred his antagonistic attention from Jews to Catholics, forbidding publication of Catholic newspapers.

Heinrich Held, premier of Bavaria, which is overwhelmingly Catholic, and also head of the important Bavarian Catholic Populist party, says there will never be another Hohenzollern ruling Bavaria, and Bavaria wants no more of Hitler.

At Kaiserlautern, fighting between Hitlerite Nazis and Catholics resulted yesterday in serious injuries and death. Impetuous Mr. Hitler will find himself busy with a religious war on his hands, especially a war against Catholics.

YOU MUST take your grain of comfort where you find it in this country. You never hear the cry: "Juramentado! Juramentado!" which in the Philippines warns populations that insane killers with "jungle madness" are at large, killing as they go. Two such killers "ran amok" yesterday on Bongaw Island and killed seven with sharp knives before the constabulary shot them down.

Thanks to our prohibition-bootleg crime wave, we have an organization of killers in this country that make the Filipinos seem peaceful, although our killers work systematically, to "protect their rackets," and do not run amok.

ZANGARA, WHO attempted to kill Gov. Roosevelt, was sentenced to eighty years in prison, asked the judge not to be "stingy," and make it 100 years. His request may be granted. The sentence may be prolonged to 120 years, and if any one of those shot should die, capital punishment would shorten the prison term.

Zangara will start his eighty-year term on the state prison farm at Raiford, Fla., working on the farm or public roads, and taking his turn in the sweat box if he refuses to work. In prison, he will have the benefit of moving pictures and sermons.

PUSH WIDE BLUE LAW REPEAL

KLINE TO HEAR FATE NEXT WEEK

Mayor Charles H. Kline will be arraigned for sentence in Butler a week from today, Judge Thomas D. Finletter, in Philadelphia, specified this time for resuming the Mayor's case in a telegram to District Attorney Andrew T. Park today, stating:

"Please notify all concerned that I shall proceed with Kline case at 11 on March first."

The telegram was in answer to a telephone request by Park that the Judge set an early date for sentencing Kline, a few hours after the Supreme Court had refused to review the misdemeanor conviction against the Mayor yesterday.

Actual pronouncement of sentence next Wednesday may be deferred when the Mayor's counsel asks for the reinstatement of his motion for a new trial.

This will be opposed by the prosecution. Attorney W. D. Stewart, who had made virtually all the arguments in court for Park, will do so again. He will contend that the motion was once refused by Judge Finletter, that furthermore it expired legally when the term of court in which it was filed ended last year.

If Judge Finletter should refuse to reinstate this motion the Mayor will then be sentenced. But it is unlikely that he will immediately lose his office, for Pritchard will then appeal to the higher court.

CAMPBELL'S AUTO SETS RECORD

Sir Malcolm Hangs Up Mark of 272 Miles an Hour

International News Service.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., Feb. 22. — Traveling almost five miles a minute, Sir Malcolm Campbell, British speed king, today shattered his own automobile speed record by whipping across the Daytona Beach course at the fastest pace ever achieved by man.

His official speed for the runs over the nine-mile course was 272.108 miles an hour. He bettered his previous mark of 253.968 miles an hour by almost 20 miles an hour.

WINS WITH EASE

Traveling faster than any other human being had ever traveled on land before, Sir Malcolm swept over the comparative rough beach with apparent ease. Observers in the timing tower and along the route noticed that his huge car bounced very litle as it raced over the sand at a speed of almost five miles a minute. It took less than 13 seconds for him to cover the measured mile.

As soon as the Bluebird had roared to a stop at the south end of the course, mechanics rushed to the car and started to change the tires to permit the northward run to be made as quickly as possible.

Although 20 miles an hour faster than his previous one way record, Sir Malcolm's mark on the southward run fell short of his goal. He hopes and believes his Bluebird is capable of making 300 miles an hour.

On his first run, southward along the sea-girted course, Sir Malcolm reached the dizzy speed of 273.556 miles an hour. This run was made against the wind.

On the northward run, with a southeast wind on the tail of his 2,500 horse-power "Bluebird," he made slower time, but he still managed to pale his former record into insignificance with a pace of 270.676 miles an hour.

IGNORES WARNINGS

Risking his life in order not to disappoint the crowds which took advantage of the holiday to run out and see his giant racing car in action, Sir Malcolm ignored the warnings of American Automobile Association officials. Visibility along the entire nine-mile course was poor, and officials had feared that the attempt would end in tragedy.

The following table shows the highest speeds attained by human beings on land, air and water.

Auto—272.108 miles per hour, Sir Malcolm Campbell, in his Bluebird, February 22, 1933.

Airplane—406.997 miles per hour, Lieut. O. H. Stainforth, British Royal Air Force, September 29, 1931.

Motor boats—124.91 miles per hour, Gar Wood, Miss America X, September 20, 1932.

Roosevelt Cabinet Picked

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—Word reached informed quarters in Washington today that President-elect Roosevelt had completed selection of his cabinet, and that the list contains one surprise—Daniel C. Roper, of North Carolina, for Secretary of Commerce.

The information was that Homer Cummings, of Connecticut, would be Governor-general of the Philippines, regarded generally as the highest appointive office outside the cabinet.

COMPLETE SLATE

State—Cordell Hull, of Tennessee.

War—George H. Dern, of Utah.

Justice—Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana.

Postoffice—James A. Farley, of New York.

Navy—Claude A. Swanson, of Virginia.

Interior—Harold Ickes, of Illinois.

Agriculture—Henry A. Wallace, of Iowa.

Labor—Miss Frances Perkins, of New York.

Of the 10, all but one or two have been regarded as foregone conclusions for several days.

FLIER TRIES TO SAVE PARENTS

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Feb. 22. (INS.)—A daring attempt of a son to rescue by airplane his marooned mother and father, the latter critically injured, from the wilderness fastnesses along the international boundary line east of International Falls, started here today.

C. J. Lanander, Jr., of Minneapolis, took off in a plane piloted by E. W. Luhrsen, to make a dash northward to tiny Emerald Isle in Rainy Lake, in an effort to save the lives of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Lanander.

Lanander, a civil engineer, is critically injured. A tree fell on him. He and his wife are out of food. They penetrated the wilderness last October and prepared for the winter with what they thought were ample food supplies.

Word of the disaster was telephoned to young Lanander here by neighbors of his parents, when Mrs. Lanander fought her way through the heaviest snowfall the area has seen in years to tell of her husband's plight.

MacDonald Delays Debt Mission Plans

LONDON, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—Prime Minister MacDonald has made no definite arrangements to visit the United States in connection with the debt conference to be held next month, he indicated in the House of Commons today.

ROOSEVELT BOMB PLOT SIFTED

Secret Service Hunts Mailer of Crude Death Device

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—Secret service men were off again today on the trail of a man who apparently sought the life of President-elect Roosevelt.

A shotgun shell, crudely wrapped and arranged so it could explode if handled injudiciously, was found in a package in the Washington postoffice, addressed to "Franklin D. Roosevelt, Washington, D. C."

PROBED IN NEW YORK

The fact that the postal inspector did not immediately report the matter to the Secret Service was taken by officials in the latter organization to indicate the case did not present "an acute danger" to the President-elect.

Since the Miami incident, in which five persons were wounded by Giusseppi Zangara in an attempt on the life of the President-elect, the Secret Service has put on extra precautions against all methods in which attempts might be made on Mr. Roosevelt's life.

Of the apparently "live" shotgun shell found here, postoffice officials speculated that the chances of its exploding were "about one in ten," but said its explosion was a certainty if it were dropped "perpendicularly."

DEVICE SEIZED

The missive, which was seized by postal authorities, was not considered by them to be sufficiently dangerous to turn over to government explosive experts, but was taken home by W. J. Satterfield, chief of the Washington division of postal inspectors, and deposited for safekeeping in his private safe.

Officers of the Naval Ordnance Bureau who are usually charged with the destruction of such explosives expressed doubt that the shell would have had deadly effect even if exploded at close range.

Cermak Shows Gain After Restless Night

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 22.—(AP.)—Dr. Frank Jirka said this afternoon that Mayor Anton Cermak, wounded in an assassin's attempt on the life of President-elect Roosevelt last week, "apparently has recovered" from the colitis which distressed him yesterday and today. He spent a restless night.

Dr. Jirka made his statement after a brief visit to the room of the Chicago Mayor in the early afternoon.

Dr. Jirka, the Mayor's son-in-law, said:

King Takes Throne To New Slow Tempo

LONDON, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—When King George took his seat in the throne room at his first investiture of the year today, the Scots Guards band played the national anthem in a new slow tempo, recently adopted at the King's recommendation.

The function was a resplendent full-dress affair at which persons named on the New Years honor list were invested with their honors.

Carnegie's 'Gospel' Stirred World

Andrew Carnegie's "gospel of wealth"—that it is a disgrace to die rich—was proclaimed in a magazine article in 1889, and created a sensation, as will be perceived in today's installment of Hendrick's biography, on page 18. John D. Rockefeller wrote a letter of approval.

The Homestead strike is now looming upon the horizon. Hendrick sketches the labor troubles which preceded the great outbreak of 1892, and tells of Carnegie's sympathetic attitude towards the toilers.

Bandits Shoot Teacher, Terrorize Three Towns

BROTHERS HELD IN CRIME WAVE

Two gunmen shot a girl teacher and terrorized other residents of McKeesport, East Pittsburgh and West Elizabeth as they swept through Monongahela valley cities and towns in stolen automobiles, leaving a trail of robberies behind them early today.

Police said the two-man "crime wave" was at an end with the arrest of two brothers, residents of Pittsburgh, who pleaded guilty at a preliminary hearing in McKeesport Police Court to charges of felonious shooting, highway robbery, pointing firearms, carrying concealed weapons and larceny of two automobiles.

BLAMES BROTHER

The suspects gave their names as Lawson and Harry Christy, of 174 Wabash avenue, West End. Lawson, 24, confessed, according to police, and blamed his brother, Harry, 36, for the shooting of Miss Dorothy Ulm, 21, school teacher, of 1308 Sumac street, McKeesport.

A few minutes before midnight McKeesport police received a report of the holdup of Andrew G. Anderson, 31, of 813 Burbridge street, Port Vue, and Miss Stella

4 Ministers Hurt As Auto Overturns

EAST FINLEY, Pa., Feb. 22.—(AP.)—Four ministers of the United Brethren Church are recuperating from injuries received when their auto skidded and overturned while on their way to the funeral of another minister.

They are Dr. E. B. Learish and Dr. F. W. Davis, of Johnstown; Dr. J. S. Fulton, Claysville, and Dr. W. S. Wilson, conference superintendent, who was to have officiated at the funeral of the Rev. John Watson, McKeesport pastor.

HOUSE GETS STEEDLE BILL

Measure Provides for Sunday Sports, Entertainment

Developments in the Legislature today as it adjourned until next Monday night were these:

The House Law and Order Committee was ready to report favorably the Steedle blue law repealer, much broader in scope than the Schwartz bill, which the House already has passed.

O. K. Eaton, counsel for the Senate Utility Investigating Committee, asked dismissal of a temporary court injunction preventing him from examining the bank and brokerage records of former Public Service Commissioner James S. Benn.

Three attempts of Senator Mansfield to amend the Coyne bill providing 5 per cent fees for the delinquent tax collector's office in Allegheny County were defeated.

The manner of dispensing alcoholic beverages, if such are legalized, was a subject of study by the new liquor commission named by the House.

A bill providing for transfer of $3,333,333 from the motor license fund to the general fund was sent to the Governor.

EATON FIGHTS BENN WRIT

HARRISBURG, Feb. 22.—Oliver K. Eaton, counsel for the Senate Utility Investigating Committee, today petitioned the Dauphin County courts to rescind a temporary injunction secured by Former Public Service Commissioner James S. Benn, enjoining the committee from examining his bank and brokerage records.

Benn had pleaded that such examination would be an "unwarranted infringement" on his rights of privacy.

In today's petition, Eaton charged that Benn, while a member of the Public Service Commission, had earned $110,000 in salary, but deposited $888,738 in banks. During the same period he charged Benn had bought $617,244 worth of securities.

Walter L. Morgan, Benn's son-in-law, deposited $761,022 in the same period, Eaton averred and $312,604 in cash transactions passed between Benn and Morgan. In 1929, it is alleged, Benn purchased a $63,000 home.

School Strike Threatens In West View Feud

West View residents prepared for school and tax strikes today, in protest of the school board's appointment, amid shouts of indignation last night, of Robert McKee to succeed H. N. Hennon as supervising principal of the borough's schools.

The appointment of Hennon's assistant came on the heels of a plea by the Rev. O. B. Emerson, the spokesman for the West View Parent-Teachers' Association and for a citizens' committee that had obtained 2,000 names to a petition demanding Hennon's retention.

Mrs. Thomas R. Reed, an officer of the parent-teacher group, and a sponsor of the citizens' organization, declared that the dual strike would begin in the borough as soon as the residents could organize.

Hennon's contract expires in July. He has been the head of West View's schools for 17 years.

The board's decision was behind closed doors. Following the Rev. Emerson's address, Dr. A. E. Torrens, president, asked members of the board and the solicitors to retire to another room in the West View Junior High School to hold the executive meeting.

Coyne Beats Mansfield In Tax Fee Battle

HARRISBURG, Feb. 22.—Three efforts to amend the Coyne bill regulating the fees of Allegheny County's delinquent tax collector, were defeated in the Senate today when the bill came up for second reading. Senator William D. Mansfield led the fight to reduce the fees below the 5 per cent set in the Coyne bill, and was backed by Senators Frank J. Harris and Herman Brandt, of Allegheny County.

On a motion to eliminate the present 10 per cent fees entirely, Mansfield was voted down, 17 to 13, Republican organization senators standing with Senator James J. Coyne. A second motion to cut the fee to 3½ per cent was downed by 16 to 13, and a third amendment, to make the fee 4 per cent, lost by 17 to 13.

Mansfield finally abandoned efforts to amend the bill, but will fight it Monday night when it comes up for final passage.

Today's action was sprinkled with sharp interchanges between Mansfield and Coyne during which Mansfield charged that the tax collector had netted as high as $100,000 a year. Coyne insisted that under his bill the net for the collector would be no more than $20,000 in the best years.

To make the office a salaried post would increase rather than decrease expense of the county, Coyne insisted. He said that the city delinquent tax office had been operated for $33,000 a year under the fee system, but now costs $99,000. Mansfield declared that the Delinquent Tax Collector in the county had collected $7,500,000 over a four-year period, with an overhead of only $155,541.20.

Coyne denied there was widespread interest in the subject in Allegheny County, asserting that when a public hearing was held on the bill last week in Harrisburg, "only a court stenographer, a clerk and an insurance agent appeared in opposition."

He was referring to Harry Bastow, head of the Allied Boards of Trade; J. Roland Brady, of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board, and James F. Malone, former president of Council.

SENATE VOTES EMERGENCY REGULATION IN BANK CRISES

New York Financier Outlines Ideas on Slump Cause

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—The Senate today adopted without debate the Couzens resolution authorizing the Comptroller of the Currency to adopt any emergency regulations for national banks that are applied to state institutions by State Legislatures.

The proposal, which now goes to the House, was brought up by Senator Couzens (Rep.), of Michigan, and put through unanimously without a word of discussion.

WITHDRAWAL LIMIT

The measure is designed primarily to make possible a limitation on withdrawals from national banks if states take such action.

A proposal being considered by the Michigan Legislature would segregate frozen and liquid assets of that state's banks and permit withdrawals of those deposits that are supported by the liquid assets.

Meanwhile, the question of limitation of withdrawal of deposits from banks in distress, especially withdrawals by large depositors in position to know conditions in advance, stole the show today at the Senate Finance Committee's inquiry into general economic conditions.

Senator Couzens, interrupted a prepared statement by Winthrop W. Aldrich, president of the Chase National Bank of New York, in which the banker was outlining his ideas as to the causes of the depression, with a discussion of the banking situation.

MORTGAGE SITUATION

Aldrich also was questioned by Senator Gore (Dem.), of Oklahoma, as to the farm mortgage situation.

Referring to the fact that many banks which have received aid from the Reconstruction Corporation had been closed, Couzens said:

"It comes to this: There must be a partial moratorium or restriction on withdrawals in every state."

Couzens asked how "preference" withdrawals — withdrawals by large depositors causing the bank to have to borrow from the Reconstruction Corporation, could be stopped.

Aldrich replied:

"You can't stop it."

Couzens said:

"Then I don't think we ought to go along assisting them."

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(Universal.)—Views expressed by William Randolph Hearst in a letter read at yesterday's Senate Finance Committee's hearings into the causes and cures of the depression brought speedy approval by Senators.

Senator Smoot (Rep.), of Utah, committee chairman, said:

"His views are succinctly stated. No one can misunderstand or misinterpret them. Many of his suggestions ought to be incorporated into law."

Senator King (Dem.), of Utah, said:

"Mr. Hearst's letter is a very important contribution to present discussions on the subject of recovery. It is worthy of great attention."

Senator Glenn (Rep.), of Illinois, said:

"It is a very impressive and important picture of the causes of the depression and a thoughtful series of suggestions to bring back better times. It is to be hoped that this letter receives wide attention, both in the congress and out. Mr. Hearst's outline should be very helpful."

Senator Copeland (Dem.), of New York, declared:

"I am tremendously inpressed with Mr. Hearst's letter. Its outline of this depression is indicative of straight thinking and clear speaking. It contains suggestions, which if enacted into laws, would promote the general welfare and improve the conditions of the country."

'Pay Own Way' Trip Approved in House

HARRISBURG, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—The House today had adopted a resolution authorizing the appointment of a legislative committee of 10 Senate and 20 House members to attend the Roosevelt inaugural at their own expense. The resolution was introduced by Representative Joseph A. Simon, Clinton, Democrat. It was sent to the Senate for concurrence.

ANTI-BLUE LAW BILL REPORTED

passed—was ready today for presentation on the House floor.

The Law and Order Committee of the lower branch of the Legislature gave the blue law repealer favorable consideration, but decided not to report it to the floor until Monday night.

The bill, introduced at the start of the session by Dr. Joseph G. Steedle, McKees Rocks, is the same as that sponsored by County Judge M. A. Musmanno when a member of the Legislature in 1931. It is a direct local option measure, but puts the burden of choice as to Sunday observance upon those who would liberalize the present system.

Each municipal division would be permitted to decide for itself what recreations should be permitted, five questions being included in the bill. They deal with outdoor sports, with or without admission, theaters, and in one question lump everything which is legal on other days.

The vote in the committee was close, and there is little likelihood that the bill, if brought to a vote, will receive as many votes as did the Schwartz Sunday baseball bill two weeks ago. The Schwartz bill was passed with 127 votes. Enough of these would be for the Steedle bill to give it the necessary 105 to pass.

With its embracing program, it is doubtful if Gov. Pinchot would give the measure the same favorable consideration he is understood to have for the Schwartz bill.

Today's action is viewed as in part an effort by liberalists to force the hand of the Senate, which is tossing the Schwartz bill about and suggesting numerous amendments which are unsatisfactory to those backing the bill in its original form.

FIVE QUESTIONS

Under the Steedle bill, five questions would be submitted to the voters at the 1933 municipal elections to determine whether sports and entertainment should be allowed and admissions charged.

The questions:

1—Legalizing on Sundays, games, sports, amusements and entertainment of all kinds and types which are legal on other days.

2—Legalizing outdoor games and sports such as baseball, football, tennis, golf, swimming, etc., for which an admission fee is charged.

3—Legalizing outdoor games and sports for which no admission is charged, but at which a collection may or may not be taken.

4—Legalizing Sunday indoor sports, games, amusements and entertainments such as dramas, comedies, motion pictures, operas, vaudeville, concerts, miniature golf, swimming, basketball, etc., to which or for which an admission fee is charged.

5—Legalizing Sunday indoor sports, games, amusements, and entertainments to which no admission is charged, but at which a collection may or may not be taken.

EDITOR BACKS TECHNOCRACY

Defending technocracy as a solution for the present economic ills, Oscar Ameringer, Socialist editor of the American Guardian, declared that it lost its influence through jokes and puns. He said:

"Poking fun at the findings of the technocrats will not do away with the causes which made technocracy popular overnight. For all the prescriptions of master-minds both here and in Washington, recovery is not in sight and indications point that the worst is yet to come."

Ameringer will speak on "Technocracy As It Appears to a Veteran of the Labor Movement" tonight in North Side Carnegie Hall.

TREASON BILL BEFORE HOUSE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—Legislative preference was given in the House today to the Eslick bill to make it a crime to advocate or promote the overthrow of the federal government by violence.

The Rules Committee voted the priority.

Advocates of the legislation pressed for action immediately after the Miami attempt to assassinate the President-elect last week.

The measure is directed at all who "by word of mouth or in writing" advocate "the overthrow or subversion of the government of the United States by force."

COPPER STOCK DEAL BEFORE SENATE

Wouldn't Do It Again, Financier Tells Inquiry

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—Telling Senate investigators of operations in copper stock by the National City Company, financed by the National City Bank, Charles E. Mitchell, chairman of the bank's board, frankly acknowledged today that "I wouldn't do it again."

Mitchell made the statement to the Senate Banking Committee as it disclosed the details of participation by the bank's security affiliate in three joint accounts organized to trade in copper stocks.

SALES CRITICIZED

As the banker agreed the transactions had been financed by stockholders in the bank, Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel, asked if he thought it "a proper thing for a national bank to participate in a joint stock account."

"On the look back, I don't think we should do that kind of thing again," Mitchell replied, emphasizing, however, that the bonk stock was issued for the purpose of setting up a fund for such trading.

Pecora criticised the sale of 1,300,000 shares of stock in the Anaconda Copper Company by the National City Company to the public in 1929.

DENIES CHARGE

He pointed out the stock which was acquired for an average price of $100 was sold to the public at around $120 shortly after the world price of copper had dropped from 24 to 18 cents within a month.

Mitchell said he had considered the stock, now selling between $7 and $10, was a good long time investment and hotly challenged a suggestion by Senator Brookhart (Rep.), Iowa, that the company had decided "it was about time to get rid of it."

TREASON BILL BEFORE HOUSE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—Legislative preference was given in the House today to the Eslick bill to make it a crime to advocate or promote the overthrow of the federal government by violence.

The Rules Committee voted the priority.

Advocates of the legislation pressed for action immediately after the Miami attempt to assassinate the President-elect last week.

The measure is directed at all who "by word of mouth or in writing" advocate "the overthrow or subversion of the government of the United States by force."

Zangara Bullet Unites Girl Victim, Brother

MISS MARGARET KRUIS.....'YES, THAT'S MY BROTHER!'

KINSMAN GONE NINE YEARS

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 22.—(AP.)—An assassin's bullet intended for President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt may bring about a family reunion.

Margaret Kruis, of Newark, N. J., one of five persons wounded by Giuseppe Zangara's bullets in the attempt upon Roosevelt's life here last Wednesday night, has learned that her brother Herman, whom she has not seen for nine years, is living in Lynden, Wash.

A letter to the chief of police here brought the information that the Washington man and Miss Kruis are related.

At the hospital, where she is recovering from a bullet wound in the head, Miss Kruis yesterday said she had not seen her brother for nine years, and had not heard from him for six years.

She said she probably would go to Lynden this summer to visit him.

Kruis said in his letter that his sister's birthday is on February 24, and when she read that Miss Kruis said:

"Yes, he's my brother. Why he even remembers my birthday."

She will be 24 Friday, she said. she said.

Her father and mother are traveling in Holland, she said.

Evidence of alleged fraud in the district found in the Allegheny County Bar Association's recount of ballots will be presented before O'Brien.

All testimony at the hearings will be certified to a committee appointed by the House of Representatives to sit on the contest.

No definite place for holding the hearings has been decided upon, but efforts are being made to obtain a room in the new County Office Building.

DIRECT FEDERAL RELIEF FIGHT REOPENS

Drive for $500,000,000 Fund for Needy Before House

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—The battle for $500,000,000 direct federal aid to the needy was reopened in the House today as leaders weighed their course on the Wagner relief act passed by the Senate.

House Progressives, dissatisfied with the Wagner plan, announced they would seek to substitute the La Follette-Costigan proposal for a direct grant of a half billion dollars to the states.

Representative LaGuardia (Rep.), of New York, said:

"We must have more relief to the unemployed, and the La Follette-Costigan plan is much better than loans to the states through the R. F. C. as provided in the Wagner bill."

The policy of Democratic House leaders was still undecided, with some of them apparently fearful that a huge grant of relief funds will destroy their fight for economy in the present session.

REASON FOR WAGNER PLAN

The Wagner plan was framed to avoid a direct drain on the treasury. The R. F. C., under the proposal, would issue its notes to obtain the necessary funds. Since it has left about $150,000,000 of the fund set up for states last year, approval of the Wagner measure would provide $350,000,000 for relief purposes.

Representatives of the large cities in the House were backing provisions of the Wagner bill liberalizing the R. F. C. Act to permit loans to municipalities for "needful" projects.

This provision, it is declared, would permit cities to begin many large construction projects which cannot be classified as self-liquidating under the present law.

DEMAND FARM RELIEF

Coupled with the relief effort in the House is the demand for farm mortgage and debtor relief legislation.

Representatives Rainey and Jones (Dem.), of Texas, with La Guardia, are leading a campaign for enactment of a general mortgage relief bill. Under the proposal of the former, all agricultural indebtedness in the country would be financed, while La Guardia would set up a federal discount bank for both farm and city mortgage refinancing.

BANDITS SHOOT GIRL TEACHER

Maser, 29, of 1714 Coursin street, McKeesport.

Miss Maser, a maid at the Coursin street address, was sitting in Anderson's car in front of the house when the bandit car drove up. The elder man, pointing a 22-caliber automatic, demanded their valuables, and, when the younger man stripped off her wrist watch, she pretended to swoon.

The bandits fled, obtaining only $1 from Anderson, who succeeded in obtaining the license number of the car.

With the report of the robbery, McKeesport police checked the license and learned that it was stolen from Frank H. Hammer, 266 Watsonia boulevard, on February 4.

HOLD UP GIRLS

While police were on the lookout for the car, the bandits struck again—this time choosing two unescorted girls for their victims. Dorothy Ulm and Mrs. Grace Fulton, 19, both of 1308 Sumac street, were unloading a bridge table from their car in front of their home when the bandits appeared.

Miss Ulm, unheeding, ran towards the house for help. A shot rang out and she fell with a bullet in her thigh. The bandits fled.

Lawson, police say, told them they went to East Pittsburgh.

Returning to McKeesport, according to the younger brother's alleged confession, they came across Harold Moore, 28, of 425 Washington avenue, Dravosburg, at the Duquesne end of the Riverton Bridge. Moore told police the bandits obtained $41 and a watch. The watch, Moore reported, was found in the possession of Harry.

PAIR SURPRISED

Shortly before 3 o'clock this morning, West Elizabeth police surprised two men in the act of loading groceries from a chain store in their car. The robbers escaped. McKeesport police, apprised that the men were headed towards that city, were on the lookout and Patrolman Ray Morgan came upon the two brothers walking along the street.

The brothers, police declared Lawson told them, had engaged in numerous holdups throughout the Pittsburgh district.

Senate Group Favors St. Lawrence Treaty

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—The Senate Foreign Relations Committee today favorably reported the treaty between the United States and Canada for construction of the gigantic St. Lawrence seaway.

Crimson Editors Hoax Harvard on New Prexy

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Feb. 22.—(AP.)—An apparent hoax perpetrated by the editors of the Harvard Crimson, undergraduate daily, resulted today in the appearance of a purported issue of that publication with the announcement that "Henry E. Clarke, '04," had been elected President to succeed A. Lawrence Lowell. Investigation revealed the paper had been printed without knowledge of the Crimson editors and the story wholly without basis in fact.

Boston newspapers, tipped by telephone that the Crimson had obtained a "scoop" on a special meeting of the board of overseers of the university, sped to the Crimson office where piles of what appeared to be genuine copies of the paper contained the news in bold headlines, supplemented by several columns of information.

Later attempts to confirm the story brought from officials of the university the statement that to their kno ledge there was no such person as "Clarke, '04," nor had there been any meeting of the overseers, such as described by the paper.

The issue was replete with alleged telegrams of congratulation from President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt and others. Roosevelt was described as a classmate of the mythical Clarke.

Subsequently David Weld, '34, president of the Crimson, said he had no knowledge of the issue.

BRUNETTE, BOOTLEGGER ARRESTED IN DENVER KIDNAPING

CALL LINKS PAIR WITH GAMBLER BEING HELD

Operator of Two Ritzy Resorts Grilled in Boettcher Case

International News Service.

DENVER, Feb. 22.—Charles Akers, 36-year-old bootlegger, and a dark-haired woman giving her name as Marion Rodgers, 25, were jailed by Denver police early today as they pushed their investigation into the kidnaping of Charles Boettcher II along the lines indicated by the arrest of Charles Stevens, 40.

Police brought the couple to headquarters from the Union Station after they had made a telephone call to Stevens' wife in Colorado Springs.

Stevens is said to have a record of 45 arrests in St. Louis in the past 20 years. Police declare he is well known in the underworld of that city and believe gangsters may have had Boettcher pointed out to them while the latter was visiting one of Stevens' resorts.

RESORTS PATRONIZED

The Willows Club and the Star Ranch Club, which Stevens operates, are patronized by wealthy Denver people. Police quoted Stevens as saying:

"Young Boettcher lost $1,200 at the Willows Club about a year ago. He didn't pay back the last $500 of this loss until early this year."

In the meantime the strain of 10 days of worry and anxiety was making itself more noticeable on members of the Boettcher family. Claude K. Boettcher reiterated his previous statement that he was ready to do business with his son's kidnapers, and would readily pay the $60,000 ransom demanded, if he could be assured of his son's safe return.

MYSTERY CRIME

Arrest of Stevens recalled to detectives another mysterious Denver crime, one which to date has never been solved. Frank Evans, wealthy Denver broker, who was murdered on Dec. 19, 1929, as he was putting his automobile into the garage at the rear of his home, was negotiating for purchase of a half interest in the Havana Club, then operated by Stevens, it was revealed later.

Members of the notorious Bostleman gang, who came to Denver from St. Louis in May, 1931, to rob a large department store, only to be caught redhanded and sentenced to long terms in the Colorado penitentiary, were believed to have visited the Havana Club. A telephone number secreted in the clothing of Eddie Ryan, one of the gang, was found to be that of the club.

He said:

"I think the situation today is calling for a dictatorship so that the necessary economies can be brought about by President Roosevelt."

PITTSBURGHER WINS HONOR

PRINCETON, N. J., Feb. 22.—(INS.)—Frederic Tremaine Billings, Jr., of Pittsburgh, captain of the Princeton varsity football team, chairman of the undergraduate council of the student governing body and winner of a Rhodes scholarship, was presented by Acting President Edward D. Duffield with the Pyne Honor Prize, the highest general distinction conferred by Princeton upon an undergraduate, at the meeting of the National Alumni Association in Nassau Hall here this morning.

Student Billings

The Pyne Honor Prize was founded by Mrs. Taylor Moulton Hanrahan, of New York City, in memory of her cousin, M. Taylor Pyne, a trustee and benefactor of the university. It is conferred annually at the winter alumni meeting upon "that member of the senior class who, in the opinion of the president of the university, the secretary of the university and the dean of the college, has most clearly manifested the following qualifications: Excellent scholarship, manly qualities and effective support of the best interests of Princeton University."

Billings is the son of Mrs. Frederic Tremaine Billings and the late Dr. Billings, of 4916 Wallingford street, Pittsburgh.

JURY MAY ACT IN ART SHOW STORM

Directors to Request Bowman Prize Be Withdrawn

The storm in Pittsburgh art circles over alleged copying by Ralph Bowman, second prize and $100 winner at the Associated Artists' exhibition, continued today behind locked doors.

But the secrecy invoked by President Chris Walter, of the association was not tight enough to keep from the public the knowledge that the jury is to be asked if it will reconsider its award and rescind Bowman's second prize.

The decision was taken at a stormy meeting of the board of directors last night by nine artists who failed to vindicate Bowman after extending him a personal interview.

Bowman's second prize painting, "Betty Joan," was declared by Louise Pershing last week to be a copy of an earlier work by Sir James J. Shannon; two other pictures by Bowman have seen the finger of suspicion levelled at them backed by purported proofs.

It was learned that, if the jury agrees to rescind the prize award, no attempt will be made to collect the $100 which has already been paid Bowman. This decision was made after consultation between Walter and Attorney Henry Oliver Evans.

Evans, noted civil and trust attorney, patted Walter on the back, figuratively speaking, and told him to forget the $100."

The decision to ask the jury to reconsider followed a fiery declaration by Milan Petrovits, one of whose works is said to have become a model for Bowman, that Petrovits would resign from the association unless some disciplinary action was taken.

Bowman's only defender among the nine present was Albert C. Daschbach, who urged that "Bowman's own guilty conscience will be his punishment."

Other artists answering the roll call included G. F. Biehl, Anna Belle Craig, J. C. Kilroy, Elmer Stephan, Everett Warner and Anna G. Woodside.

In the course of the meeting, Walter explained as "just a joke" an interview he granted about two weeks ago in which he said art works, this year, must have "it." In the course of that interview, he said that:

"The jury this year did not accept a painting if it felt the painter was imitating a mannerism. But they did select works if they felt the artist was sincere in his work."

ANTI-MACHADO REVOLT OPENS

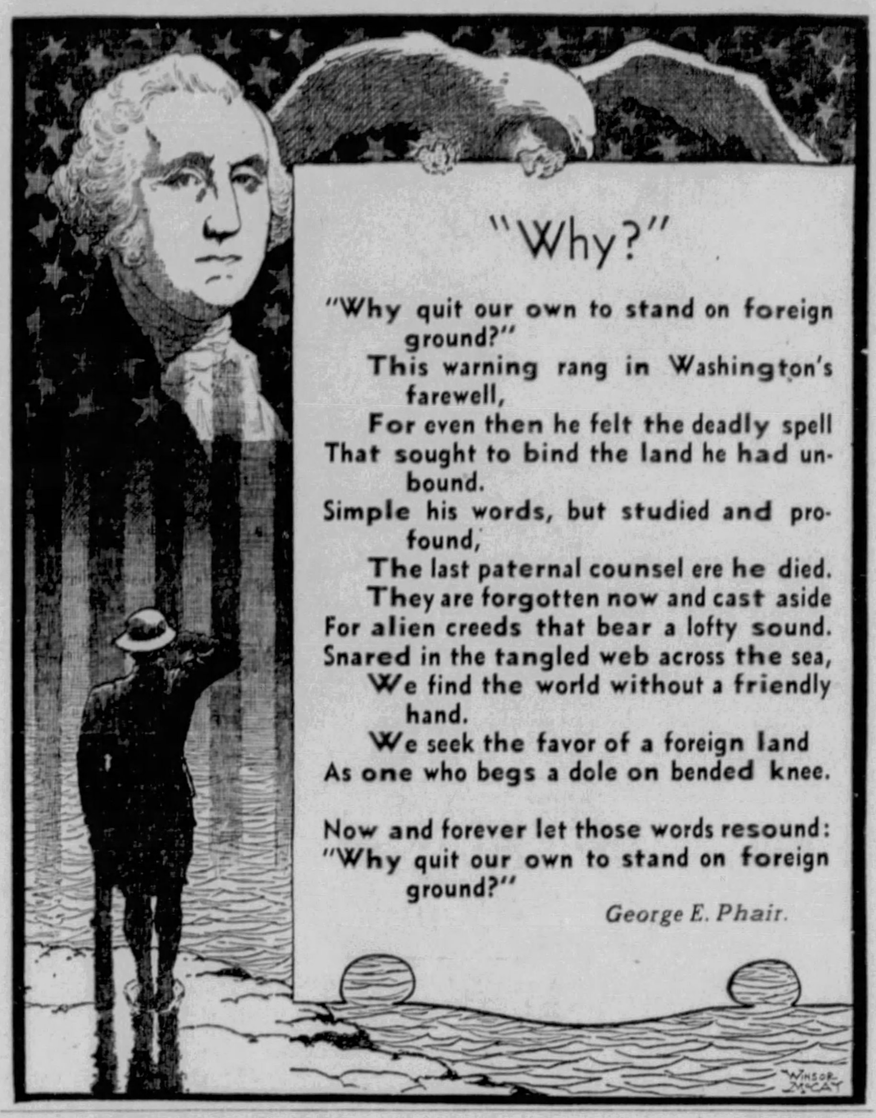
HAVANA, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—At least half a dozen outbreaks in widly separated parts of the island were reported today, heralding the long-predicted revolt against the Machado rule.

In distant Oriente Province, cradle of all Cuban revolutions including the one against Spain, at least one serious clash occurred yesterday.

At Santa Clara, in the middle of the island, rebels were reported to have attacked the government's military station, carrying away arms and ammunition.

At the other end of the island, not far west of here, a band of men tried to seize arms and money at a grocery store in the town of Alquizar. They critically wounded the owner.

Meagre reports said two soldiers were slain in a battle at San Antonio, a town near the U. S. Naval coaling station at Guantanamo.



"Why?"

"Why quit our own to stand on foreign ground?"
This warning rang in Washington's farewell,
For even then he felt the deadly spell
That sought to bind the land he had unbound.
Simple his words, but studied and profound,
The last paternal counsel ere he died.
They are forgotten now and cast aside
For alien creeds that bear a lofty sound.
Snared in the tangled web across the sea,
We seek the favor of a foreign land
As one who begs a dole on bended knee.

Now and forever let those words resound:

JAPS CAPTURE RAIL CENTER IN JEHOL

First Important City Seized By Army In Drive

CHINCHOW, Manchuria, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—Gen. Suzuki's Japanese army, headed for Jehol City, 200 miles from here, has captured its first important objective, the rail head at Peipiao in Jehol's coal mining center.

When they marched in yesterday they found the city deserted. The Chinese inhabitants, forewarned of the advance, had partially destroyed the railroad tunnel from Nanling, a few miles to the east, and had attempted to blow up a bridge to check the Japanese march.

ADVANCE TO CONTINUE

There will be only a brief halt at Peipiao. From there the advance will move across the province to Jehol City. The army people here speak of the operations thus far as merely a preliminary to a major offensive scheduled to open on Friday.

Meantime, there have been operations in other sectors. Two thousand mounted Chinese and Mongolians were threatening the town of Tungliao, in Manchuria, 200 miles north of here and close to the Jehol border. There was more fighting at Kailu, an important town of Jehol on the winding Liao Ho River, 30 miles southwest of Tungliao.

Vinson to Present Bill For Bigger Navy

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—The threat of increasing Japanese and decreasing American influence in the Far East was described to the House today by Chairman Vinson of the naval committee as one reason congress should vote for a bigger navy.

Speaking on the naval supply bill allowing $315,000,000 for the navy during the next fiscal year, the Georgia Democrat said:

"The international situation today is for from reassuring. This is no time to scuttle the navy and jeopardize the safety of our country. Rather must we proceed to build up that navy to the relative strength provided by the Washington and London treaties.

"I wish hereby to give notice to the House that with the convening of the next congress, I propose to introduce a bill providing for the upbuilding of our navy and to use my utmost endeavor to have it enacted into law."

"I explained everything in a letter to mother."

When the detectives went to the theater for the letter, they were informed two unidentified girls who aided Stella after she swallowed the poison had destroyed it.

OLD SONG ASKED BY MRS. HOOVER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—A favorite song of her California childhood, "La Paloma," was asked for by Mrs. Herbert Hoover yesterday when making her farewells to the Congressional Club.

At that gathering of wives of Senators and Representatives, the current of conversation ran "back home," and the strummed guitar of a Mexican boy entertainer wakened memories for Mrs. Hoover.

She called to the honor table Tito Guizar, and leaning forward, chatted with him several minutes. Then to the women who filled the ballroom of the Shoreman Hotel, she announced:

"I have asked him to sing a song especially for me. When I was a little girl, boys just like him used to sing "La Paloma" in Monterey.

Hughes Compares F.R. To George Washington

'Father of Country' Championed by 'Debunker'

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—George Washington, Rupert Hughes believes, would have insisted upon payment of the Allied war debts and would have been a "ferocious" foe of prohibition.

Thus did the novelist and historian epitomize the political philosophy of the Father of His Country in an interview on the eve of Washington's Birthday.

Hughes, who has become well known as Washington's champion "debunker," said that, as a matter of fact, he had been much misunderstood; that he does, and always has considered Washington:

"The greatest and most useful citizen that the world has ever seen."

Mr. Hughes compared Washington with the incoming President, Franklin D. Roosevelt, and found many "unsuspected similarities."

Said Hughes:

"They both were aristocrats, in the ancient meaning of that term. They both were powerful physically—I understand that Roosevelt is a physical giant in his upper torso. Washington suffered from physical infirmities, too, despite his tremendous strength.

"They both were chosen to lead the people after sweeping depressions. And I consider that an excellent omen. When Washington assumed office the people had the subconscious realization that the worst had been reached—and passed.

"I believe that much the same thing will occur after March 4. I believe that Franklin D. Roosevelt will be able to arouse the confidence of the people in much the same way."

Hughes spoke of repeal and recalled that in the uncertain early days of the republic, the people had decried the signers of the Constitution as "traitors and anarchists."

"They speak of flouting the Constitution today—when it is proposed merely to repeal one of its amendments. The people forget history—they forget that once 'the people' denounced as traitors the very signers of this now sacred document."

HUNT MYSTERY PAIR IN SLAYING

MT. HOLLY, N. J., Feb. 22.—(INS.)—The six shots that killed pretty Ruth Mowdray Wilson and Horace Roberts, Jr., her sweetheart, as they lay unclad on a bed, were heard by two mysterious figures standing in the shadows on the lawn of the palatial Wilson homt in Moorestown.

Although the couple, a man and a woman, had been mentioned in gossip and rumors before, today they were officially linked with the case by former County Detective Arthur Carabine.

So important did Prosecutor Howard Eastwood consider the new information that he was concentrating all his energies on developing the new angle. The startling disclosure was made by Carabine as one of the 16 witnesses question by Eastwood yesterday to determine whether the case should be reopened.

Carabine had threatened to "break this case wide open" after asserting he was not allowed to conduct a full investigation of the double slaying in 1929.

It was understood that at least one of those summoned before him leaned to the theory that Bradway Brown, wealthy young socialite printing company executive, was slain at his Palmyra home recently as he was about to reveal hitherto concealed facts in the Wilson-Roberts case.

Letters were found in the room addressed to Miss Emmons from Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Sailly and bearing postmarks of Christopher and Johnson City, Ill. They indicated the Saillys were relatives of the dead girl.

Minzer said he met Miss Emmons six months ago and that she was a waitress. The police said he was apparently irrational.

HOUSE STUDIES RUM CONTROL IN STATE

By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURG, Feb. 22.—The Sowers liquor commission, named by the House to recommend license and control legislation to replace the Snyder state dry enforcement act, repeal of which was voted yesterday by the House, is principally concerned about the definition of a saloon and the manner in which alcoholic beverages shall be dispensed should either beer or other alcoholic beverages be legalized.

Members of the Sowers Committee, including Representatives Joseph G. Steedle, Leonard P. Kane and James L. Quinn, of Allegheny County, had before them today 40 separate questions to be studied for action when the committee meets again, probably next week. Some of the questions, such as should treating be abolished, and should bartenders be encouraged to make up certain types of drinks, appeared to be facetious, but the committee seems basically to be taking its duties seriously.

REPORT AWAITED

Prohibition has captured the attention of the Legislature, and the Sowers committee will be expected to report to the House recommendations as to the machinery by which the convention system for consideration of federal repeal shall be dealt with. New bills on this subject are expected next week, with the drys presenting a proposition counter to that of Senator John J. McClure, who would create a convention of 67 delegates, one from each of the state's 34 Congressional districts and 33 at large.

The Sowers committee is practically insistent that there shall not be a return to anything approximating the old saloon system, which is the reason for a demand that a saloon shall be defined. Various methods of dispensing alcoholic beverages are proposed, as well as the unit by which license shall be controlled.

Some of the questions proposed for study, which may be the subject for hearings to be held by the committee in Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, are:

Shall control be state-wide, such as it would be by a state commission?

Shall control be by county unit, by commission or by judges?

Shall there be a brewers' license, hotel keepers' license, restaurant keepers' license, bottlers' license and wholesale dealers' license?

Shall the wholesale dealer be the only person who can import liquor into Pennsylvania?

SALE IN BOTTLES

It is proposed that the distiller bottle and sell only in bottles in the commonwealth, so as to guarantee purity of the liquor to the consumer.

How near a church or school shall a license be granted, and what shall be license fees, and shall they be graduated according to the prosperity of the neighborhood in which license is asked?

The committee wants to know whether the purchase and consumption of liquor on any premises makes them a saloon, and is anxious to know whether this might apply to hotels and restaurants, even in department stores.

Measures also are sought to prevent brewers' and distillers' becoming interested in saloons, or liquor-dispensing establishments, as well as a law dealing with whether beer can be sold in kegs or bottles.

Dry Chief Sees Repeal Increase Federal Force

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—The opinion that a larger federal force than is now maintained would be required for complete prevention of shipments of liquor from wet to dry states, should the Eighteenth Amendment be repealed, was expressed today by Amos W. W. Woodcock, director of prohibition.

He explained to newspapermen that in referring to complete prevention of shipments he meant every type, ranging from that carried on the person or in automobiles in small quantities to truck loads or freight consignments.

Sharon Extortionist Begins Prison Term

SHARON, Pa., Feb. 22.—(INS.)—Harold Brest, 21, today began serving a three-to-six-year sentence on his guilty plea of attempted extortion under threats of kidnaping a nephew of Mrs. Frank H. Buhl, millionaire widow. Robert Pegg, 17, who was arrested with Brest when the latter walked into a police trap, was paroled for two years.

Brest demanded $5,000 from Mrs. Buhl. She is an aunt of the late William Whitla, victim of a sensational abduction in 1909.

Bill to Aid State Fund Up to Pinchot

Measure Assures Money Needed For Schools

HARRISBURG, Feb. 22.—The Legislature totday completed its emergency effort to replenish a depleted state treasury.

The Senate sent to the Governor the Sterwling (Philadelphia) bill transferring $3,333,333 immediately from the motor license fund to the general fund. If the bill is signed by the Governor, the state will have at once money necessary to pay allocations to distressed school districts and other general fund requirements.

These payments have been delayed by lack of funds caused by heavy demands for unemployment relief under the 1932 Talbot act. Relief payments have been taken from general revenues in anticipation of the receipts from the emergency one per cent sales tax which are due April 1.

RETIREMENT FUND

Senator John J. McClure, Delaware, organization Republican leader, introduced a bill in the Senate to reduce the amount of money which the state and school districts must pay into the public school employes retirement fund.

In a statement on his bill, McClure said it reduces from two per cent to 1.16 per cent of the amount of the teachers' salaries which must be paid into the fund by the state and school districts.

He estimated this would save the state and the school districts each $500,000 a year, or a total saving to taxpayers of $1,000,000 a year. However, by this reduction the state must continue to pay money into the fund 40 years instead of 30 years at the present rate.

SALARY CUT BILL

Meanwhile the Republican state organization advanced its economy program another niche, proposing as the next move a 15 per cent salary cut for all state employes. Senator John W. Howell introduced the resolution providing for the reductions. It was referred to the Judiciary General Committee.

Howell's measure, if it clears all hurdles, would make the cuts mandatory where legal. Officials whose salaries are statutory would be asked to accept the slash. In its present form, the resolution provides thot salaries in excess of $1,500 shall not be reduced below that amount, but it makes no specific reference to the salaries which are now under the $1,500 mark.

The House passed five bills and sent them to the Senate. They included Spann (Allegheny) defining the titles acquired by Pittsburgh in exercising the power of eminent domain, and Hoffman (Allegheny) requiring consent of the electors of the entire township in event parts of first class townships are annexed to boroughs.

The city of Pittsburgh would be authorized to sell or dispose of its interest in property condemned for public parks or for any public purposes under the terms of a bill offered by Representative Spann, Allegheny.

The House adjourned at 11:27 a. m., and the Senate at noon, until next Monday night at 9 p. m.

VOTE MACHINE REPORT DUE

HARRISBURG, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—The Senate voting machine investigating committee will report to the Legislature near the end of the session, Senator Frank J. Harris, Allegheny, said today.

Created by the 1931 session of the Assembly, the committee held nine hearings in several sections of the state in connection with the use and purchase of machines.

Harris and other members of the committee, Senators Howell, Lackawanna; Roberts, Northampton; Parkinson, Greene, and Armstrong, Allegheny, held hearings in Harrisburg, Pittsburgh, McKeesport and Clairton.

Honored for Saving Sight of Many Babes

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 22.—(AP.)—Dr. F. Park Lewis, internationally known for his work in the prevention of blindness, today was awarded the chancellor's medal by the University of Buffalo at its mid-winter graduation.

Dr. Lewis, born in Hamilton, Ont., 78 years ago, is credited with fathering the movement which led to general use of a silver salt solution dropped into babies' eyes at birth to prevent an infection that formerly was said to have caused 25 per cent of blindness in children.

THUGS KIDNAP, ROB AUTOIST

Two bandits who kidnaped E. D. Lynch, of 6830 Frankstown avenue, and forced him out of his machine in Lemington avenue extension after robbing him of 23 cents and a cigaret lighter last night, were sought by police today.

Lynch was stopped by a red light at Hamilton avenue and Dahlem street and the pair leaped into his car. One, pressing a revolver at his side, ordered Lynch to drive to Washington boulevard, thence up the Leech Farm road and to Lemington avenue extension. One of the bandits asked:

"How were the collections today?"

After taking his change and lighter, the pair forced him out of the machine and drove away.

SCHOOL CODE FACES HOUSE CHANGES

HARRISBURG, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—A new dress is being made for the proposed new school code, as the result of attacks by teachers, school directors and educators upon its principal provisions.

After a public hearing yesterday before the House Committee on Education, Representative Thomas B. Wilson, McKean, the chairman, predicted it will be changed considerably before it reaches the House.

Wilson said the committee will start re-drafting the code immediately, but declared the Legislature "will not adjourn and leave the districts to muddle along." He asserted:

"One thing is certain: there will be relief for the local districts."

Meanwhile Dr. James N. Rule, Superintendent of Public Instruction, worked to complete the department's plan for internal changes.

ROOSEVELT LEAVES N. Y.

During the day, the President-elect had conferred with a number of leaders, including his newly-appointed Secretary of the Treasury, William H. Woodin; Jesse Jones, of Texas, a director of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation; Norman H. Davis, who has aided in organizing the world economic and monetary conference, and A. P. Giansinni, banker.

Named to Cabinet

SENATOR CORDELL HULL

WILLIAM H. WOODIN

Silver Coin Favored In Reversed Report

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—The House Coinage Committee today reversed itself and approved a subcommittee bill providing for the purchase of silver bullion for monetary purposes.

HULL VETERAN OF CONGRESS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(Universal)—Senator Cordell Hull, grave Tennessean whom President-elect Roosevelt has picked as Secretary of State in the incoming administration, will take that office with a deep background of knowledge on international trade and finance.

A student by nature, Hull was for many years a member of he House ways and means committee, and there specialized in tariffs and international trade.

He was first elected to the House in 1907 after serving in the Tennessee legislature and on the bench in that state, and served continuously until elected to the Senate in 1931, except for two years, 1921 and 1922. He is 61 years old.

Never an orator, Hull's part in Congress, and particularly in the Senate, has been a quiet one, in which most of his work has been outside the chamber, studying theories of international remedy.

His outstanding contribution to American legislation was in his authorship of the present income tax laws amendment to the Constitution. He has been a champion of estate and inheritance taxes.

Hull was chairman of the Democratic National Committee from 1921 to 1924, and left the committee with a surplus in its treasury rather than a deficit for one of its few times in history.

Tall and slim, with steel gray eyes and thinning white hair, Hull is one of the most portly figures in the United States Senate, and one of the most courtly. His voice is extremely soft and distinctly musical and his manner gentle. He is 61.

Senator Hull was confined to his bed today with a severe cold. His only comment upon the public announcement of his appointment was that he was "mindful of the high honor and great responsibility involved. He said, smilingly:

"And I hope to meet the responsibility with some degree of efficiency."

WOODIN COMPOSER, ART PATRON

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—(INS.)—Eighth Secretary of the Treasury that Pennsylvania has furnished the nation, William Hartman Woodin, who today holds the portfolio by appointment of President-elect Roosevelt, is one of the nation's outstanding industrialists, but he would prefer to rummage about the bookstalls of New York for rare prints and etchings rather than preside over Uncle Sam's fiscal fortunes for the next four years.

A multi-millionaire unskilled in politics, Woodin has avoided the public eye while seeking diversion in the satisfying pleasures of literature art and music.

He plays the violin for his own amusement and has composed a great many numbers. Some of these compositions have attracted wide attention both in this country and Europe. One called "Covered Wagon Days Suite" has been played by several symphony orchestras and has been heard on the radio.

One of the earliest recollections concerning the next Secretary of the Treasury is that his musical instruction terminated when he was seven years old. His piano teacher gave up when young Woodin refused to practice or play the music set before him. He liked to improvise then and still does. The inaugural march to be played March 4 is one of his works.

He also is a noted bibliophile and numismatist, and his collections of first editions and rare coins are famed the country over. His favorite outdoor hobby is fishing.

In selecting Woodin for Secretary of the Treasury, Roosevelt has chosen a man who has prospered in industry despite the unsettled business conditions of the last five years.

His main job is president of the American Car and Foundry Company, manufacturers of street cars and buses, for which his salary is $100,000 a year. In addition he is a director in several other vast industrial enterprises.

Woodin's fortune, made by his own initiative, has been variously estimated at from $2,000,000 to $20,000,000.

A Republican throughout most of his adult life, Woodin voted for Al Smith in 1928 and last fall supported Roosevelt and contributed heavily to his campaign.

Since the election he has spent most of his time assisting the President-elect in formulating a satisfactory plan for reorganization of the country's railroads.

Because of his intimate knowledge of German language, music and culture, Roosevelt first asked Woodin to accept the post as Ambassador to Berlin. He declined because of his desire to avoid public life.

Woodin is small in stature, with gray hair and gray mustache. He is soft-spoken and mild-mannered.

He will celebrate his 65th birthday on May 27 next. He was born in Berwick, Pa., and has spent most of his adult life in Philadelphia and New York.

He was educated at Columbia University and upon graduation went to work for his father, head of the firm of Jackson & Woodin, which later was absorbed by the company the new Treasury Secretary now heads. After the amalgamation, he rose rapidly from district manager to assistant to the vice president and president. He became a member of the board of directors of American Car, and in 1922 was named president.

The new Treasury head, although active in the last two national campaigns, has held but one official post—that of New York State Fuel Director during the winter of 1922.

He is married and has four children. His father died several years ago. His mother is living and spends her summers at the beautiful Woodin home at Berwick Heights.

LATEST CIPHER NOT SO TOUGH

By KENNETH A. NAGEL
Cipher Editor

Here's a new cipher contributed by Oscar Peterson, of Holidays Cove, W. Va.

It's easy. Let's hope you will have it solved before you get tomorrow's paper.

Cipher No. 60 was hard, all right.

You were told yesterday that it consists of 12 alphabets. These should be written, one following the other, in a square—18 letters wide, 18 lines deep.

This square is then divided into four equal sections, each nine letters wide and nine lines deep.

From the center up write digits from 1 to 9—that will give to each of your upper nine lines a different number. Do the same thing for the lower nine lines.

In deciphering the "cents" figures in the code denote the section—.01 to .25 are in Section No. I; .26 to .50 in No. II; .51 to .75 in No. III; .76 to .00 in No. IV. In the "dollar" column, the digit figures represent the column counting horizontally from the center; the tens figures represent the column counting vertically from the center. Where the amount in the code is less than $10.00, it denotes only the separation of two words.

And after all that trouble, you found that the answer was—

RIGHT TO SLASH DEBTS DENIED BY SENATOR

No department of the government, even Congress, has the right to agree to a cancellation or to further reduction in the foreign debts.

This declaration was made last night by Arthur R. Robinson, Senator from Indiana, at the banquet of the Pennsylvania Bankers' Association, Group Eight, in the William Penn Hotel.

Senator Robinson pointed first to the fact that the debts contracted previous to the armistice were voided. In every case the debtor powers considered the amounts as loans and agreed to pay on demand with interest at 5 per cent.

FUNDING AGREEMENTS

In spite of this, Senator Robinson declared, a debt funding commission was provided for by national legislative authority, and in 1925 and 1926 funding agreements were entered into with all debtors to the United States.

As a result of these pacts the United States cancelled all the principal, provided the debtor countries would assist this country in paying the interest on its bonded indebtedness which had been incurred to raise money with which to repay the loans. Senator Robinson declared:

"We gave them the most generous terms in those settlements that had ever been accorded debtor by creditor in all the history of recorded time.

"In the first place, we allowed them 62 years in which to pay, and so generous were we, that we asked Great Britain to pay only 3.69 per cent per annum for that term of years, at the end of which their indebtedness would be completely discharged."

In the settlement with France, America agreed to permit her to pay 2.16 per cent over the same period of years and with Italy this nation was even more lenient, permitting her to sign an agreement providing for a payment of 1.13 per cent, Senator Robinson pointed out, declaring:

"In other words, all of the principal sums of all nations entering these funding agreements were cancelled and all they were required to pay was a very small rate of interest, much lower in fact in each case than we were and are obligated to pay to our bondholders."

Preceding the banquet the executive committee of the bankers' association adopted resolutions favoring elimination of the four-mill tax on savings accounts and urging support of Senator Morris Einstein's amendment to the personal property tax bill.

2 HELD FOR FIRE PERILING 10

Two men were held in the county jail today in connection with a fire which destroyed three frame dwellings in Castle avenue, North Versailles Township, routing 10 persons into the zero weather, February 8.

Uras Karan, 40, owner of the dwellings, and Stanley Wisnowsky, 45, a boarder, were arrested by County Detectives Peter Connors and James O'Brien and lodged in jail on district attorney's retainers last night. Karan acquired the buildings 18 months ago for $1,000, according to the detectives. The property had been insured for $6,500, it was said.

'Advertise to Beat Slump—Firestone

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 22.—(AP.)—Harvey S. Firestone, the rubber magnate, says newspaper advertising and curtailment of production costs helped him conquer the panic of 1920 and pay off a debt of $45,000,000. He made the statement here last night in a speech before the Committee of One Hundred.

Charles F. Kettering, of Dayton, O., president of the General Motors Research Corporation, suggested that industry go back and study the fundamentals of science and utilize the nation's unlimited possibilities as a step toward advancing prosperous times.

Great Gold Strike May End Slump

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—Another great gold strike—possibly equal to past rushes which helped end former depressions—was described to the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers today.

One-eighth of the world's present gold production is the estimated, though not yet proven, capacity of this new field, the Consolidated Goldfields, South Africa. This dazzling estimate was reported by F. W. Lee, supervising engineer, geophysical section, United States Bureau of Mines, Washington.

Bellevue Boy Hit By Auto, Man Held

Randall Eleyet, 10, son of Hugh R. Eleyet, 68 Keswick avenue, Bellevue, was injured when struck by an automobile after school yesterday in Lincoln avenue near Straw avenue, Bellevue. L. R. Richards, 2446 Perrysville avenue, was arrested by police as the driver of the car and has posted bond for a hearing. Police said Richards drove away after the accident. The Eleyet boy was treated by a physician and taken to his home.

MARY LOUISE PAIGE

White-robed Preacher Has Dispensed With Tutor

With a mild simplicity and child-like faith, 14-year-old Evangelist Mary Louise Paige is here for a series of revival meetings.

Dressed in all-white raiment when she ascends the pulpit, she delivers her message with quiet earnestness, in marked contrast to the more spectacular methods of other evangelists.

Large crowds have gathered to hear her in many cities. She will speak in Bethel Tabernacle, 62 Chatham street, up to March 5.

Mary Louise is accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Grace Paige. A tutor, who traveled with them last year, has been eliminated since Mary Louise feels she has grown up.

TAFT MANAGER PLAN SPEAKER

Attorney Charles P. Taft, of Cincinnati, and Joseph P. Dilworth will be the principal speakers at a mass meeting of citizens favoring the city manager form of government and changes in Pennsylvania's election laws in Syria Mosque March 2. Hearings on bills now before the Legislature covering both subjects will be held by House and Senate committees March 14.

Sponsoring the meeting are the Pennsylvania Conference on Election Laws, of which Alexander P. Lindsay, of Pittsburgh, is chairman, and the Municipal Charter Committee, headed by F. C. Irish. The citizens committee, Civic Club of Allegheny County, Allied Boards of Trade, League of Women Voters and other organizations which have indorsed the proposed legislation are joining in arrangements for the rally.

COUNTY BACKS PENSION FIGHT

To hurry legislation for a new county pension fund so retired employes will not suffer protracted loss the County Commissioners have set aside $1,000 to help fund officials to visit Harrisburg. The appropriation was made yesterday by Commissioners C. C. McGovern and C. M. Barr.

Controller Robert G. Woodside and Deputy Treasurer A. E. Anke will name a committee to go to Harrisburg next week. The commissioners made it plain that the fight was up to the pensioners and present employes, and that if action is not taken now the bill may go unpassed in the present session.

Blind School Group Will Present Play

The Saturday Evening Club for Girls, composed of members of the Western Pennsylvania School for the Blind, will present a play, "A Southern Cinderella," by Walter Ben Hare, Friday, March 3, at the school, Bellefield avenue. There will be an organ solo by Mary Campbell and selections by the school orchestra. Proceeds will go to general welfare work.

ASK MORE FARE FOR PUPILS

A proposal to extend the payment of carfare for school children in six districts of the city is being studied by the Board of Public Education.

A plan presented by Superintendent Ben G. Graham would provide transportation for school children in East Carnegie, Swissheim, Banksville, Lincoln Place, Hays and Hazelwood.

Chartering of special cars from the Pittsburgh Railways Company for the Swissheim, Lincoln Place, Hays and Hazelwood pupils is involved in Dr. Graham's proposal.

A complete report on school teachers holding outside jobs has been asked by the board from Supt. Graham.

This action followed a protest by Dr. A. L. Lewin, member of the board, when a list of 11 teachers holding additional jobs was presented. In times like the present one job should suffice, he said.

SUSPECT TAKEN HERE CLEARED

DETROIT, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—Police announced today that Henry Euler, arrested in Pittsburgh, has been cleared of suspicion of complicity in the slaying of James Battel, grocery clerk, during a holdup here Friday night.

Euler had been arrested on a non-support charge. Suspicion was directed against him, police said, because he fitted the general description of the robber, who had left a hat with a Pittsburgh newspaper in the band.

Later one of the witnesses tentatively identified Euler's picture as that of the holdup man.

Pittsburgh police reported Euler was driving a stolen automobile and had a gun when arrested.

7 ESCAPE JAIL BY RADIO RUSE

BECKLEY, W. Va., Feb. 22.—(AP.)—Seven Raleigh County convicts were at liberty today after attacking the jailer and using a drink of water, a knife and a radio in their jail-break.

Jailer Clayton Mills said Oden McQuire attacked him after he had given permission for the prisoner to leave the "bull pen" for a drink of water. While another prisoner held a knife to his back, McQuire took his keys and blackjack, the jailer said.

A trusty then was ordered to take a radio down to the jail office and say Mills had told him to take it to a repair shop. As the trusty opened the outer door, Mills said, the prisoners fled through it.

SENATE DOOMS COAL BILL

The Davis-Kelly coal bill, described by its supporters as a measure to stabilize the ailing coal industry, apparently was doomed today.

A United States Senate subcommittee yesterday reported the measure unconstitutional, and there seemed little likelihood further action would be taken on it before Congress expires March 4.

Introduced by Senator Davis and Representative Kelly, both of Pennsylvania, the bill provided for licensing of coal operators, set up other regulatory machinery, and would have fixed wages and controlled prices.

Philip Murray, international vice president of the United Mine Workers, said today he had hopes the full committee would act on the measure before March 4. He added:

"No matter what action the committee may take, we will continue to fight for such legislation. If this bill is defeated, a similar one will be introduced at the next session of Congress."

CHILD, MAN DIE AFTER FALLS

Mary Koplos, 4, of 1835 Colwell street, died last night in Allegheny General Hospital from a fractured skull suffered when she fell down the cellar stairs in the home of her uncle, Nicholas Pateros, 1933 Chislett street, Sunday night, according to a Coroner's report.

Mary and her cousin were playing on the steps when she fell.

G. C. Ross, 76, of 114 Highland avenue, Coraopolis, died last night in Valley Hospital at Sewickley, from injuries suffered in a fall down the cellar stairs in his home February 7, the Coroner's office reported.

'Y' Jobless School Hears I. K. S. Officer

The result, he said, will be a revival of interest in art, crafts, literature, dramatics and other cultural activities.

Police and county detectives today sought Mrs. Gertrude Compton, 31, of 801 Sherwood road, Forest Hills, who disappeared Monday when she started downtown to pay a bill.

Her husband, George Compton, who requested the search, learned his wife had paid the bill. Mrs. Compton is 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighs 145 pounds, is light complexioned and wears glasses.

The little Girl who wouldn't

EAT

When a youngster has no appetite, it's probably due to stasis. A little fig syrup will soon correct this condition — then watch the child eat.

Nature knows best! Never coax a child to eat! Remove the cause of a youngster's poor appetite—get rid of stasis. Children who don't eat are sluggish. Not to correct this is inexcusable. It is so easy to do, if you will only use the "California treatment." Read what it is doing for listless children in every part of the country!

When appetite fails, tongue is coated white, eyes are a bilious yellow; don't give small children any constipating cathartic that drains the system and weakens twenty feet of tender bowels! California fig syrup is the only "medicine" they need!

Sluggishness ended in 2 Weeks!

That girl or boy with a furry tongue and a bad breath should not be dosed with salts! California fig syrup will gently stimulate the colon muscles—and the child you used to coax to eat will fairly devour his food, digest it, gain weight.

Try the California treatment! Begin tonight, with enough of the pure fig syrup to cleanse the colon thoroughly. Less tomorrow, then every other day, or twice a week until the child's appetite, digestion, weight, complexion, tell you the stasis is gone.

Be sure to get the real California fig syrup. Any druggist has it, all bottled, with directions. It's a natural, vegetable laxative. Just as good for babes of two years as boys of ten. They all love its taste!

NOTICE TO MOTHERS

There are imitations of California fig syrup, and those who would sell you some substitute even when a child's health is concerned. Don't ever take any bottle that is not plainly labeled CALIFORNIA.

QUICK! STOP THAT COLD

IN THE DRY OR FIRST STAGE!

A cold ordinarily goes through 3 stages: The Dry Stage, the first 24 hours; the Watery Secretion Stage, from 1 to 3 days; and the Mucous Secretion Stage. It is twice as easy stopped in the first stage. In fact, when a cold gets beyond the first stage it may become serious.

As your doctor will tell you, there is nothing better you can take for a cold than Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine. It does the four things necessary. It opens the bowels. Kills the cold germs and fever in the system. Relieves the headache and grippy feeling. Tones the entire system and fortifies against further attack.

That is the relief you want and anything less is courting danger.

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine contains nothing harmful. May be safely taken by young and old and whether you stay indoors or go out. There is absolutely no penalty attached to its use. For more than 40 years it has been the standard cold and grippe tablet of the world, the formula keeping pace with Modern Medicine. Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine now comes in two sizes—30c and 50c. Get yourself a package today and be on the side of safety. Resent a substitute.

NOTE: During Epidemics a tablet or two of Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine every morning and night will do much to keep your system immune.

COX DECLINES SEA TRIP

A group of Father Cox's friends had visions of seeing him on an ocean liner today bound for Bermuda and enjoying the invigorating sea air for a week. Knowing that his condition is such, just coming out of the hospital, that an ocean voyage would quicken his recuperation, these friends offered him this trip with all expenses paid.

Father Cox said:

"Give me the money instead of the trip for my poor."

Father Cox had as his guest yesterday Mons. Enrico Pucci, domestic prelate from Vatican City, Rome. Mons. Pucci is a representative of the Vatican Press, the official newspaper for the Pope. Mons. Pucci has consented to take care of the mailing of the Vatican City cachets which Father Cox is sponsoring for the opening of the holy year. This cacheted envelope bearing a commemorative design stamped with Vatican City postage and the cancelation of that office, will be sent to all persons by Father Cox upon the donation of 25 cents for his unemployment relief fund. Names and addresses should be sent to Father Cox, Old St. Patrick's Church, Pittsburgh, Pa., at once.

Father Cox also gets a liberal cash donation for his relief fund for every subscription to the Sun-Telegraph sent in on the blank on this page. The Sun-Telegraph has already given him approximately $1,000 on this account.

BELLEVUE HITS SCHOOL CODE

The Bellevue School Board has protested to the House Educational Committee, that it was not given adequate time to consider the new state school code and that certain school districts face a reduction in state aid at a time when they can not afford it under its provisions.

The board pointed out that provision of the code relating to state subsidies to third and fourth class districts is particularly unfair to districts whose real property valuation is above that prescribed in the six mill and $1,100 formula as a basic test of tax raising ability.

28th to Remove Phila. Headquarters

HARRISBURG, Feb. 22.—(INS.)—Headquarters of the Twenty-eighth Division will be transferred from Philadelphia to Harrisburg on or about March 13, according to an announcement from Adjt. Gen. David J. Davis.

The move is coincident with the expected appointment of Brig. Gen. E. C. Shannon to succeed Maj. Gen. William G. Price, Jr., Chester, division commander.

Are You Deaf By Choice?

Have you just accepted dullness of hearing as a natural misfortune and made absolutely no effort to check its progress? Guaranteed cures are absurd, but good results from proper treatment are frequent enough to justify the effort and the really small expense incurred by trying. We treat each case according to its requirements, doing our utmost to get results and using every recognized method skillfully. This should appeal to any sufferer from deafness, head noises and catarrhal conditions.

Patricia Pitt

Last night was an all-Pittsburgh night at the Stage and Play Society's February production in the Twentieth Century Club's auditorium, "Vamp Till Ready."

The play, a comedy, was a Pittsburgh product, written by Mrs. Harvey Gaul or Harriet Avery Gaul. The actors were Pittsburghers, and the audience was Pittsburgers.

And the audience was ever so smart. And of all the appealing costumes I saw last night, the most striking was that worn by by black-haired Mrs. Wilmer M. Jacoby. The low-cut bodice of her frock was of white satin, cut square in front, and tied in a bow in back, and decorated with gardenias, and the skirt was of black crepe.

Unusual Gown

Her wrap was stunning—a cape of white panne velvet, shirred to form a ruff about the neck and trimmed, too, with gardenias.

Christine and Martha McKelvy, daughters of Mrs. William McKelvy, were there, with Christine, the blonde sister, wearing fuschia crepe, and Martha, a brunette, vivid orange crepe.

Dresses of Crepe

Others of the younger set there last night were pretty Mary Gordon, who wore black crepe with a bodice of white crepe, cut in deep points over the shoulders to suggest sleeves; Virginia Evans in dark blue crepe with magenta velvet outlining the decolletaee; Caroline Mitchell in orange satin; Betty Kennedy in her favorite color, red; Martha Edmondson in deep purple crepe with a perky little jacket of silver lame having brief puffed sleeves.

Still others were Neil Stewart Zang, Betty McCance in blue satin, and young Mrs. William J. Kountz III, in black crepe with the sholder straps and the top of the low-cut square bodice of rhinestones.

With Mrs. Kountz was her mother-in-law, Mrs. George McClellan Kountz, in pink pebble crepe. Alive Rust was in blue chiffon. Elizabeth Jenkins in orange crepe over which she wore a luxurious mink coat, and Mary Stevenson was there.

In Blue Chiffon

Among the many faithful patrons of the drama I noted in the audience last night were Mrs. George P. Bassett, Jr., in purple crepe; Mrs. Edward Wallis Woods in black crepe; Mrs. John H. K. Burgwin, back from several years in New York and Provincetown, in black satin; Mrs. John F. Walton, Mrs. Reginald Quaile in black velvet; Mrs. Thomas L. Orr, Mrs. Frank W. Edmondson, Mrs. H. Allen Machesney and Mrs. Charles Flaccus.

Mrs. A. C. Martin was there, wearing a green crepe frock with a cape bodice of deeper green; Mrs. Samuel Harden Church, in black velvet with a black chiffon bodice embroidered in silver in a wheat design; Mrs. F. I. Merrick, Mrs. Frederick Crabtree, Miss Neil Stewart, Mrs. Mortimer Miller, Miss Edith Spencer, in beige lace.

Wears Green

Mrs. T. C. Jenkins was there to see her daughter, Clara Dorothea, a member of the cast, and Mrs. Henry Oliver Evans in black lace, there to see her actor-daughter, Louise Evans; Miss Emma Suydam in black velvet; the Albert Wellses, Mrs. H. A. Ingram, Mrs. Samuel McClay, Mrs. George S. Oliver, Mrs. Norman McLeod, Mrs. William S. McKinney, Miss Eleanor Grier, Mrs. Samuel Grier, Mrs. Julian Burdick and goodness knows how many more. I just don't have space for them all!

Our bridge benefits aren't over. Isn't that good news, for with the exception of an occasional affair we should all be rather partyless if it weren't for our benefits, in which bridge leads.

College Benefit

The Wells College Club is going to have a benefit bridge Tuesday night, February 28 at 8:30 o'clock in the University Club.

Men are to be invited to this benefit. And the party will be formal. For those not interested in bridge, there'll be jig-saw puzzles.

To Help Students

Mrs. Donald M. Campbell, of the Schenley Apartments, is general chairman. In charge of tickets will be Mrs. Charles Stotz and Mrs. Carl Fulton; of arrangements, Mrs. William Patterson and Mrs. Robert D. Campbell; of games, Mrs. J. J. Andrews; of candy, Mrs. Irving W. Wilson and Mrs. John McGhee; of publicity, Mrs. Phillip Seaman and Miss Cora May Ingham.

Gossipy Chat With Nancy Jane

Miss Pauletta Guffey hasn't decided yet what she is going to wear at the inaugural ball March 4. But if she does decide on black velvet, she is going to wear some exquisite old garnet jewelry with it.

The town is becoming more music-conscious this year than ever before. Mrs. Taylor Allderdice and Mrs. A. S. F. Keister were overheard talking about a new class in musical appreciation to be started at the Filion Studios. The course aims to give its students an idea about "the quo vadis of modern music."

Among those who are interested in this class, which promises to stuff no dates into inhospitable heads, are Mrs. William Jarvis, Mrs. Stanley Brown, Mrs. Hanson Rose.

Others who are said to be attracted by the class are Mrs. David Craig, Mrs. J. C. Dilworth, Mrs. Harry B. Wassell, Mrs. Joel Spear and Miss Helen Rauh.

Her home, Pulpit Rock, is perched near the top of one of the highest hills in Shields, and from the wide veranda one has a view of a wooded ravine and wooded hills in the distance. In the winter after a snowfall the view would fill the heart of an artist with delight.

Judge Sara Soffel to Speak From Trinity Pulpit At B.P.W. Meeting

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

For only the second time in its long history, Trinity Cathedral will have a woman in its pulpit, when Judge Sara Soffel speaks Sunday night at a service for the Girls' Friendly Society and the Pittsburgh Business and Professional Women's Club. The service will be conducted by the Rev. N. R. High Moor, dean of the cathedral.

Another important date on the B. P. W. calendar is the dinner which the club will have at the Keystone Athletic Club on March 9 in celebration of National Business Women's Week.

Yesterday that very personable young woman, Marjorie Shuler, who is national publicity chairman for the Federation of B. P. W. Clubs as well as special correspondent for the Christian Science Monitor, stopped off in Pittsburgh between trains and was entertained at luncheon in McCreery's by the local club.

The group talked of many things, but chiefly of the Federation's 10-year objective in leadership.

Miss Shuler stressed the idea that by leadership is meant not only leadership in one's club, but in one's community and home. In its final analysis it means that the women of today must not rest on the laurels of the pioneer woman, but must go on with courage and confidence to the new frontiers that are here to be conquered.

Miss Shuler is on her way to Minneapolis to cover the National Educational Association, the National Vocational Guidance Association and the National Educational Research conventions in Minneapolis. She will address the Minneapolis B. P. W., stop in Iowa for eight days and then go on to Los Angeles to speak before the California Federation of 8,000 members.

Literary Club To Hear Talk On Art

Instead of its regular afternoon meeting, the Literary Review Club will meet Friday night with Mrs. Arthur C. Horst, of Hiawatha street, as hostess. The principal program feature will be an illustrated lecture on "Art in the Home," by Mrs. J. Charles Runk, district chairman of art in the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women. Miss Pearl Reed will contribute current events.

The club has completed its study of drama and will devote the remainder of the year to a study of Pennsylvania.

Ambridge Junior Club to Hold Benefit

Decorations for the benefit bridge party which the Junior Woman's Club of Ambridge is having tonight will be carried out in red, white and blue, in keeping with Washington's birthday. The affair, which is to be held in the Laughlin Memorial Library, will be marked by a candy sale in charge of Alice Brown, Sylvia Evangelisti, Christiana Knoedler and Mrs. James Reese.

The card committee includes Myrtle Trembly, Jessie Richter and Elsie Laughrey. Tickets are in the hands of Mildred File, Margaret Nussbaum and Clara Mackintosh.

Other committees are: Refreshments, Ruth Matteson, Pearl Haskell, Dorothy Springer, Josephine Pugliano, Catherine McKeever, Violet Sickler, and Mrs. Samuel Bodle; tables, Helen McNees, Helen Haney, Anna Ewing, Lola Rupert and Alice Patterson; prizes, Mrs. Alice Messersmith and Mrs. Maurice Rubenstein.

Dr. G. D. Whitney Will Address City P.T.A.

Dr. Gerald D. Whitney, director of vocational training, University of Pittsburgh, will be the speaker for the meeting of Pittsburgh Council of Parent-Teacher Associations tomorrow in the Administration Building. He will speak on "The Value of Vocational Selection."

Pupils of the Regent Square School will present an original playlet with music.

Halliburton Tells Clubs Of Air Trip With Queen

Richard Halliburton, the author, told a highly entertaining tale of taking a queen flying in Borneo when he spoke yesterday at a joint luncheon meeting of the League of American Pen Women and the Women's Press Club, in the Woman's City Club. Among the curious customs of the people of Borneo which Mr. Halliburton described was the substitution of brass teeth for their own.

'Challenge of Leisure' Jewish Juniors' Topic

Miss Helen P. Kennedy will speak on the "Challenge of Leisure Time" at the meeting of the Pittsburgh Section, National Council of Jewish Juniors, to be held Sunday afternoon in the Y. M. and W. H. A.

Miss Kennedy is secretary of group work division of the Federation of Social Agencies.

Prior to coming to Pittsburgh, she was head of the Cleveland Girls' Council and was also an instructor in the graduate school course in group work which is now one of the largest departments of the school.

Mission Group Given Program Suggestions

Mrs. George B. Raser gave suggestions for balanced programs at this morning's meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Pittsburgh Presbytery, which was held in the Frst Church, Sixth avenue.

Frank Hipps to Speak On Federation Broadcast

"New Hope for Persons With Defective Speech" will be described by Frank Hipps, of the Byron King School of Oratory, when he speaks over KDKA tomorrow at 3:45 during the State Federation's radio period.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the First Trinity Lutheran Church will give a sauer kraut supper this evening in the church rooms, Neville street.

NEW SPRING FABRICS TEND TOWARD NOVELTY TEXTURES

THERE SEEMS to be a tendency, in fashions in general, away from plain-colored materials and towards fabrics that show a tiny pattern of some kind. Whether this pattern is a printed design or a variation in the texture apparently makes no difference; the importance is evidently attached to the fact that whatever stuff is used—silk, wool, fur or leather—it is not smooth in weave or color.

* * *

FOLLOWING this tendency, many of the spring woolens seen in clothes right now are in novelty textures—chevron weaves, stripes, diagonals, corded materials and weaves that show tiny brocades—flowers and leaves and dots in self-color. Silks are printed in small all-over patterns or woven in mottled tones. Among the furs, those of uneven texture are most popular—astrakan, breitschwantz and a fine, short-haired caracul. Even bags and shoes keep in step with this fashion, via leathers of irregular texture.

* * *

Girl Objects to Helping Boys Pay Party Bills

Or should the boy friend foot the whole bill?

Paul wondered. He didn't earn a great deal, and he wanted to save for a rainy day. Yet he liked to play a bit, too; but he felt he couldn't afford it. And why should he be expected to meet all the expense in these free-and-equal days?

"Now that girls earn money just like men, why shouldn't they pay their share?" he asked.

"Miss 1933" has some ideas why. Wonder what you'll think of them.

Dear Elsie Robinson—

I've just read Paul's letter about Dutch treat dates. I see that he thinks girls and fellows have an equal amount of money now, and that therefore the girls should pay their own way. But has he stopped to consider that parties, even before they start, cost girls more than they do men?

I hear men talk about "how cheap a girl gets off," getting taken places all the time. Yet if I showed up in the same dress on every date for a month I'd certainly be cast into the discard quickly. But Paul and his kind can wear the same suit for years, at its original $35 cost.

With two suits, a boy can conquer. With half a dozen dresses, each of which costs at least $15, I'm still short on clothes, because I have to dress decently at the office, too.

OTHER EXPENSES

Then when the B. F. sees me, it's my place he comes to. He may stay in a room with two other boys, or in an apartment with six, or at home. But I am alone in the city, and that means an apartment—or meeting boys on the street corner.

If I could stay in the sort of place boys can get away with, or get away with as few clothes as they do, I'd get off cheaply enough; but I have to have a decent place to stay. And even as things are, I'm mighty tired of having to sit in the kitchen and read a book when the roommate has a date, or giving her money to go to a show if I have one, because the B. F. doesn't like a third party around all the time.

NO DUTCH TREATS

Talk about getting off cheaply! I'd like to be able to save the money that represents the difference between what it costs me to date, and what it costs the B. F.—even when he pays all the way!

I'll never go Dutch Treat with anyone who has a decent job, even if I do "make as much" as he does. And if Paul thinks I should it just shows he hasn't been around much. That's my answer to that question! And it doesn't come from any Ladies First notion, either.

I feel better, now that I've got that off my chest. All I hope is that Paul and a few more who want the whole pie will see it? "MISS 1933."

Well, Paul, there's your answer—

And from what I've seen and heard, it sounds to me as if there were a lot of truth in it.

Most of you boys do get off cheaper on clothes and home fires than the girls, don't you? So—how about it? If you expect 'em to dress up and do you proud, or to have a spiffy place for you to come to call—should you, or shouldn't you, pay for the evening's fun?

Come on! Let's have your answer.

Fay King Commends Simplicity in Styles These Lean Days

IT'S LOVELY MOTHER - SO SIMPLE AND SWEET
A STANDARD STYLE IS ALWAYS IN GOOD TASTE
I NEVER WEAR ANY COLORS BUT NAVY BLUE OR BROWN
FAY-KING

By FAY KING

In this day of budgeting and economics it is fortunate that simplicity has always been considered the better taste even in the best of times.

The difference between a smartly dressed girl, and one who does not look so well is more often a matter of what one leaves off and the other puts on.

An ornament too much can spoil an entire ensemble. Overdressing is the most flagrant fault.

The girl who must make a little money go a long way, or whose simple clothes are made at home, may thank this very restriction for good taste.

There are simple standard styles which are never "in" or "out," neat, crispy fresh and always sweet looking. Extreme styles must be very expensive to avoid criticism.

HEART OF A WIFE

Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Ideal Place Is Found for Conference

If Helena were better—my thoughts raced madly forward as my father, Harry and Ronald alighted from my father's car and hurriedly greeted Hugh—and Lillian released from her promise to stay with her hysterical friend, then my own problem would be solved. I would not have to suffer the agonizing consciousness of being compelled to fail Lillian because of the promise Dicky had extorted from me to remain at the hotel, even if she could not go with the rescue party to be near her daughter and Carolyn in their hour of great peril.

"Your mother?" I said anxiously to Ronald, with a guilty little feeling that my anxiety was a scant one-tenth for Helena's welfare, the other nine-tenths concerned with Lillian and my desire to aid her. "Is she better, that you have been able to leave her?"

"No, she isn't," Ronald answered, his young face haggard, his eyes tortured, "but she's under a hypodermic, and so Mrs. Underwood said that it would be all right for me to come over with the rest, since Major Grantland said he wished me to come if possible."

GO TO MEETING ROOM

With a little startled thrill of approval of Hugh's course, I saw the reason for his summons to to Ronald. The boy's stepfather, who had been under our suspicion as at least knowing something of the kidnaping plot, was himself wounded by some unknown person and gone from the hotel. Ronald's mother was incapacitated by grief and consequent illness from making any decision. But Hugh meant to have Ronald's voice in the plan to rescue his sister and Marion, and the boy's opinion would be given as much weight as that of Harry Underwood, of himself, of Dicky, and even of my father.

"The room for which you asked is ready," I said, addressing Hugh, and the next minute Mrs. Merton, hurrying in, confirmed my statement.

"Do you wish to come up now?" she asked.

"If you please," Hugh said courteously, and stepped back, as did the rest, for me to precede them.

"Am I to go up, too?" I asked, wondering the while if it were the remembrance of Dicky's stern edict against my joining in the rescue that made me doubtful of my welcome to this council of war.

"Of course," my father and Harry Underwood said, but Ronald only looked appealingly at me, and I caught his arm as I followed Mrs. Merton out into the kitchen.

ASSEMBLE IN ROOM

"Be careful of your heads!" she admonished us, as she led the way up a primitive, winding, wooden stairway. "There is a door into this room from outside, but though it is almost against the mountain side, you have to go around the house to get to it, and I thought if you wanted privacy, you'd rather come this way."

"You're quite right," Hugh said, then stopped abruptly.

"Our cars," he said to my father. "They ought not to be left in sight there."

"If you'll give me your keys," Mr. Merton's calmly efficient voice said from below, "I'll drive them both into the garage and lock the doors. Nobody will know they're there."

"Good!" Hugh approved emphatically, and when the transfer of keys had been hastily made we went on into a room which made me give a little exclamation of delight, so homey and restful it was, with its wide windows on all sides, its comfortable furniture, its attractive appointments, its views of the mountain above, and its sound of music from the brook below.

But I was careful to make no comment upon the room. Indeed, I uttered no word at all. Hugh Grantland's stern, set face, and the grim attention of the other three, were no invitation to perfunctory chatter, even if my own brain and heart had not been focused upon the query:

What will they do now?

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

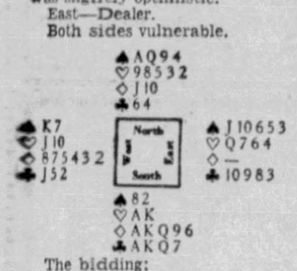
By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Forcing Trump Discards

"When you have contracted to take all the tricks and discover that your left-hand opponent holds more trumps than you do, it would appear that the practical procedure is to give him his trick, write down the score, and have a new deal," writes Mr. F. H. Aulick, of Clayton, Mo.

However, Mr. Aulick demonstrates that this principle does not always hold good, and cites, in proof, the hand below, in which he was able to prevent the loss of a single trick, although his opponent in the West held six trumps to his five. The hand was played in a Rubber game at the Hilton Bridge Club in Dallas, Tex. The bidding, as Mr. Aulick points out, was slightly optimistic.

East—Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	2 ◇	Pass	2 ♠
Pass	3 ♣	Pass	3 N T
Pass	4 ◇	Pass	5 ◇
Pass	7 ◇	Double	Pass
Pass	Pass

West opened the heart Knave, and at the moment the Dummy went down, it appeared that the Slam might rest upon nothing more difficult than a finesse, but when South won the first trick with the heart Ace and led a small diamond to Dummy's Ten, he received the bad news about the trump situation. After a long study, he discovered the one chance in a thousand to make the contract, which depended upon the exact distribution of West's hand. West, Mr. Aulick states, became somewhat impatient, and remarked:

"You have to give us a trump trick. You cannot help yourself, as I have more trumps trumps than you."

To this the reply was:

"Not yet," and the Declarer returned to his own hand with a heart, took the spade finesse, and when West's King fell to the Ace, the outlook was considerably brighter. Returning to his own hand with the club King, South now led the two high clubs, and when he continued with the fourth club, West, void of all else, was forced to trump. The Dummy overtrumped, and the South hand then contained nothing but the commanding trumps.

An interesting hand, apparently hopeless, but there are few Contract situations which are not well worth studying out. Perhaps there is a way to make a hand that seems to have in it all the seeds of defeat.

TODAY'S QUESTION

What should North respond to an Opening bid of one heart by South, with the following holding?

♡ Q 10 9 8 6 3
◇ A 10 7 2
♣ A J 3

Answer—Four hearts. If South then bids four spades, North should "sign off" with a bid of five hearts.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

The Prom Corsage

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am going to a prom and probably my escort will bring me a corsage. Please inform me as to what I shall say in regard to the acceptance of it? On which side shall I wear it? When dancing is it not inconvenient, and if it is what shall I do with it when I dance?

ADMIRER.

Thank your "beau" as you would for any other delightful courtesy that he shows you: "Thank you so much for these lovely flowers. How kind you were to think of bringing them to me." Or, "you were most kind to think of bringing me these beautiful orchids. Thank you so much."

Wear them wherever they are becoming. It depends on the style of frock. While you are dancing you may, if you wish, leave them on your table, or on your chair, if there is no table.

Placing Knife and Fork

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

We had a little argument the other day as to how a person should place his knife and fork on the plate after using them. Is there any definite or established rule on this matter, and if so, won't you please tell us about it? THE BUNCH.

Yes, this rule of how we place our knife and fork on the plate after we have finished a course is one of the most definite rules in the world of good manners. In fact, even if this seems to be a comparatively small question, it is one of the very definite details by which our manners, our table manners, are judged.

The knife and fork should be laid side by side, in the center of the plate. The handles rest on the rim of the plate nearest to us. And so that the knife and fork won't be knocked off the plate, the handles are turned slightly to the right.

Even though some appear to forget it, everybody knows that diphtheria is a preventable disease. It is prevented by immunization.

Dr. Copeland

This is accomplished by the injection of a substance called "toxin-anti-toxin." In spite of this almost certain means of protection, diphtheria still prevails among children.

This can be explained by the prejudice of many persons against inoculations. Whether it is toxin-anti-toxin, or something else, its use is feared.

Children who are exposed to the germs of diphtheria will contract diphtheria unless they possess immunity against the disease. Few children possess a natural immunity against the disease and protection can be had only by inoculation.

Now comes the important announcement of the New York City Department of Health. The good news comes that marked improvements have been made in preparation of diphtheria "toxoid." Toxoid is now perfected and will be used in place of diphtheria toxin-anti-toxin as a preventive of this disease.

When they learn about it, parents will welcome this change. Toxoid is less irritating, less painful and easier to administer than toxin-anti-toxin. When the latter is used three injections are given at weekly intervals. But when toxoid is used, only two injections are necessary. These are given two weeks apart.

Every child should be given protection against diphtheria because the dreaded disease is ever present. It is caused by a germ called the "diphtheria bacillus." This may be found in contaminated milk or other food, or it may be transmitted from one person to another by sneezing, coughing or kissing.

Those persons who carry the germs of diphtheria, though not actually suffering from the disease, are a constant menace to society. They are called diphtheria "carriers." It is estimated that 1 or 2 per cent of the general population are carriers.

Within the past year there has been a marked reduction in the number of children receiving diphtheria inoculations. In consequence, health authorities fear a marked increase in diphtheria. This is disturbing.

If you have not given your child this protection against a serious and often fatal disease, you are doing him a great injustice. I am confident it is a mistake to neglect this simple precaution.

If you have hesitated because you feared the toxin-anti-toxin injection you may be assured of the safety and greater simplicity of the toxoid treatment. You can be assured of protection against this disease by immediate immunization, regardless of which agent is used. Do not delay any longer. Consult with your physician or local board of health station for advice as to the procedure.

Ayres as Star In Musical Is Plan

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 22.—Universal is planning to feature Lew Ayres in a musical. Not so radical a step when you recall that Lew used to be a saxophone tooter back in the days before countless projection machines began to throw the image of his handsome features upon the screen.

Not that they are planning to make Lew play a saxophone in the picture. He'll be the hero, always providing that plans don't go awry, of "Lilies of Broadway," a tuneful and, it is to be hoped, dramatic pot-pourri of life as it is led after the theaters close their doors for the night.

Originally, this picture was slated as a John Murray Anderson production, but the musicals went into their famous decline and carried "Lilies of Broadway" along with them. Only the other day, Carl Laemmle, Jr., retrieved the scenario from the shelf and set Lynn Cowan and Harry Sanker to work on composing a new set of tunes.

Mr. Ayres

When these are completed and when the script is polished off with some new wisecracks, the business of casting will proceed.

In the interim, Lew Ayres once more is leading the life of a bachelor, but mildly. So far as I know, he hasn't made a public appearance with any other woman since he and Lola Lane separated.

There's a chance, but no more than that, I think, of the young actor going to England to make a picture. British National is very anxious to get him, but Universal doesn't seem impressed.

* * *

Only a publicity man met Janet Gaynor at the boat, so those vague rumors of reconciliation seem to be off. The star and her mother have taken an apartment in Hollywood. "Adorable," Janet's new picture, goes into production the latter part of this week. Meanwhile Winfield Sheehan is negotiating with U. F. A. to allow Henry Garat to stay Hollywood nine months before returning to Europe for a picture. Under present arrangements, the French leading man must leave right after the completion of "orable."

Miss Gaynor

Too bad about George O'Brien's father. The former police chief of San Francisco has taken a turn for the worse, and George has accompanied him back to Germany for treatments. . . . You must admit it's unique. Jean Harlow's plan to give her friends embossed gold passes to her house. This will enable them to use her swimming pool and tennis courts while she is working. . . . Henry Ford is becoming an autograph collector deluxe. He has just requested signed pictures of Marlene Dietrich, Maurice Chevalier and Fredric March . . . Whether she's in sport, street or evening clothes, you never see Joan Crawford without a gardenia.

See You Again Next Year, and Perhaps Twice

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

Naked repeal has got 24 states galloping to join the nudist colony.

Fifteen Legislatures are speeding up production. And it is all very patriotic on Washington's Birthday. On the same day after next year your patriot will look at the flag and see twice as many stars.

He will say:

"Gotta drink beer for taxshaysun. It's Birdington's Wash Day"

The wet fortune tellers gaze into their crystal goblets and predict the end of the world in a great amber flood.

It looks like the exalted test is rocking on its round heels. It now belongs to history and we surrender it without a contest.

It looked like a mushroom but it was a toadstool. On George's next birthday we'll be seeing you. Maybe twice.

Plays and Players :: By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Walter C. Kelly, better known as "The Virginia Judge," without doubt is THE raconteur of the stage, with scarcely an equal at humorous story-telling, an art that appears to be passing out. It has had famous exemplars, including Abraham Lincoln and Chauncey Depew as well as that great little funny man who made his living at it, the late Marshall P. Wilder. Mr. Kelly recalls his first observance of Will Rogers, riding a horse upon the stage of Hammerstein's in New York, and chewing his gum, as he worked his lariat, occasionally venturing a shy comment. Waiting his turn to go on, Mr. Kelly remarked to "Willie" Hammerstein that he thought Rogers would go far in vaudeville.

"I think you're right," was the reply, "but what the heck does he need with that horse and chewing gum?"

Mr. Kelly, seen here frequently in vaudeville, will return to Pittsburgh next week as a legitimate star, heading the cast of "Both Your Houses," new political comedy by Maxwell Anderson, produced by the Theater Guild. It will be the fourth subscription play of the American Theater Society in the Nixon. The box office sale of seats will open tomorrow.

Ray Henderson, press representative of Katherine Cornell, used the mail to let us know the plight of a Baltimore piano dealer who was asked to supply a piano for Miss Cornell's use in Sidney Howard's new play, "Alien Corn." When he heard she was a mere actress, instead of a concert artist, he said he would have to take the matter up with New York. A piano was obtained elsewhere and the lad's life was made miserable by his wife, especially when he learned that a sold-out house prevented him from getting two tickets for the opening night, as the lady commanded.

Gloria Swanson, who has been abroad making a picture, "Perfect Understanding," is a passenger on the Bremen, arriving in New York today, and will attend the premiere of her picture tonight . . . Other Hollywoodians returning from abroad are Harold Lloyd and family . . . Katherine Hepburn, who jumped into the spotlight's glare in "A Bill of Divorcement," as the daughter of John Barrymore and Billie Burke, is in New York on a visit . . . Also in the big town is Marie Dressler, for medical treatment . . . Herbert Marshall, English actor who has clicked in films here, will sail away for London this week.

Gaul Comedy Gets Many Laughs

By GEORGE SEIBEL

A very pleasant new comedy by a Pittsburgh writer—"Vamp Till Ready," by Harriet Avery Gaul—was presented last night for the first time by the Stage and Play Society at the Twentieth Century Club. It started auspiciously when the parting curtain revealed a stage setting quite Urbanesque designed by Robert Schmertz. And it continued happily as a story was unfolded that blended homely romance with humorous characterization.

On a farm in Westchester County a young wife is nursing operatic ambitions while her family fortune is vanishing. In the first act she insults her husband, who quits to take a job and "get paid for what he has been doing for nothing." In the second act the modernist composer who has been making love to her awakens her to the futility of her ambition, and she leaves to "get paid for what she has been doing for nothing." In the third act, all her parasitic guests have left and a real opera director rents all her rooms at $500 a month.

There is no burden of philosophy in the little comedy unless it is the director's dictum about modern art: "What was never new is never old." But there are many healthy laughs, and the cast of seven played with credit to themselves and the author. Madeleine McClintock was the heroine; Jack Woolley the hero. George McClellan Kountz, Jr., played the composer, and Clara Dorothea Jenkins a hard-boiled cousin. Mrs. Thomas McCance Mabon was a retired diva and Louise Evans a jewel of a housemaid. Lastly there was Chester Wallace as the operatic director—and incidentally as the director of the drama, which was generously applauded by the large and attentive audience.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal. Feb. 22.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Carter Glass, when he told the Senate that the whole Reconstruction Finance thing was bad, told them exactly what every Senator knew in his heart, but didn't have the nerve to say. Every man, every industry in the U. S. was hit by depression.

Will Rogers

Before you start dealing out public funds to help, you should have first found out, have we enough money to give aid to everyone, every industry. But no, they didn't do that, they just started right in by helping the bankers, so every man, woman and child in the U. S. thinks, and rightfully so, that they have got as much right to get some sort of government aid as the bankers.

Due to the lack of foresight of our lawmakers, the bankers, the railroads, and big business got the first U. S. dole, and it will never be finished till the last one hundred and twenty million reach in and get theirs, because they feel they got it coming. No wonder Glass was too smart to be treasurer. Yours, WILL.

PLAYGIRLS IN LOVE

By MAY CHRISTIE

"All my life," said beauty-loving Judith with shining eyes, "I've wanted to live in a beautiful place and have everything just the way it ought to be."

"Well, maybe that's rather a tall order for a Greenwich Village furnished flat, but between us I daresay we could arrange something rather nice," said Zella, puffing at her cigaret, "and anyway we'll have freedom to receive our friends, and a little comfort and privacy. This" — she shrugged her shoulders, rolling her eyes in a scornful gesture that was meant not only to include Judith's little cubby-hole of a "fourth floor back" but the whole of Mrs. Timmins' domicile, "this isn't living. This is merely existing."

She paused, looking questioningly at Judith as footsteps came along the landing and halted just before they reached the door which was ajar. The Scotch voice of Mr. Murdock sounded on the threshold.

"Gir-r-ls, I've br-r-ought a little something for you. Can I come in?"

He didn't wait for their permission, but appeared with a bottle containing a bright liquid under his arm.

JUDITH SILENCED

Judith, although touched by his kindness, was about to refuse, when Zella thanked him with unusual graciousness, reaching out her hand and taking the bottle from him.

"Certainly, it's good for all of us!"

"But I don't drink," Judith protested.

Zella, rising from the end of the bed where she had been seated, gave her foot a sharp nip in rebuke. "I'll go in the bathroom and get some glasses. Of course, Miss Brian will have some, Mr. Murdock. I know the doctors often order this for their patients. It's a splendid tonic and will do Judith a world of good."

Mr. Murdock sat down on a chair near the open door and expressed concern for Judith's wan appearance.

"If I'd my way—" he began again, but Zella returning with the glasses cut him short with a demand for a corkscrew.

Judith, propped up on her pillows in her becoming pink silk negligee, sipped rather dubiously the mixture of quinine and wine that bore the optimistic label of vermouth, and listened to the other two talking.

Every now and then Mr. Murdock's laugh would boom out, for Zella was amusing.

MISS PROSSER JEALOUS

So absorbed were they in the argument of woman versus man, embellished by humorous Scotch stories from Mr. Murdock, that they neither heard the footfalls nor did they see the head of Miss Prosser halt halfway up the stairs where she could get a clear view of the trio through the open doorway.

Miss Prosser had two rooms she grandiloquently referred to as her "suite" on the third floor. She had invited poor dear Mr. Murdock into her "private sitting room" immediately after dinner tonight, but he had made some excuse about having to go out.

Still sore at Zella for her digs, and always jealous of pretty Judith, it was quite patent to Miss Prosser that they had enticed the lone widower into Judith's bedroom, and the shameless hussies were trying to make him drunk!

She marched straight to Mrs. Timmins' office, with her long upper lip drawn down over her teeth. She'd hate to go—she'd been so comfortable here with dear Mrs. Timmins—but really when it came to men and women drinking in the bedrooms of the house—!

As Mrs Timmins rose in righteous wrath to mount to the top of her domicile and break up the improper party, Miss Prosser had presence of mind enough to suggest that Mr. Murdock be tactfully lured down first . . .

"It isn't his fault at all—you don't want him to misunderstand—to leave—he's such a charming guest and all—" she twittered.

ZELLA STRIKES BACK

If a nod was as good as a wink to a blind horse, Mrs. Timmins was nobody's fool, and understood Miss Prosser perfectly. "Leave it to me," she said, and sent Joe, the colored houseman, to tell Mr. Murdock he was wanted on the telephone. She took the receiver off its hook in the little pay-booth in the hall, and left it dangling by its cord. By the time Mr. Murdock had descended the stairs, it was quite feasible his party would have gone!

Then Mrs. Timmins followed Joe and waited in an alcove till she saw Mr. Murdock's broad back go in the right direction. She then climbed the remaining flight as speedily as possible, and proceeded to give her two forward female guests a piece of her mind.

"I can't have these goings-on! I just saw Mr. Murdock come out of here, and you undressed and in your bed, Miss Brian"—she shot an angry look at the pretty negligee—"and a bottle standing there, and you with your glasses smelling of liquor all over the place! This is a terrible example! I won't have it! I've got to consider the young girls in the house!"

"You've got to consider that old cat of a spying Prosser, you mean, who's determined to grab poor simple Mr. Murdock if she can get her claws in him!" Zela rose from the end of Judith's bed and towered over the short form of her landlady. "Now save your breath, Mrs. Timmins, because Miss Brian and I shan't pollute your pure abode—which, by the way, is very badly run, and the food has been simply shocking of late—any longer. You can take notice we're leaving a week from today—and that's final."

* * *

Judith did not see Barry Dean the following day, and when she came back to the boarding house in the evening, Zella took her out to dinner.

Zella was excited. She had had a new business offer.

OPPORTUNITY KNOCKS

She did not give Judith any details until they were seated one on each side of a little table in an Italian restaurant, with a plate of spaghetti before them.

"You know I'm getting $55 a week at Braunwitz's as assistant sales-manager in the dress department," began Zella. "Well, one of my customers wants to set me up as manageress of a little dress-shop. She's found a place to rent, over in the East Fifties, and is willing to put $20,000 or so into it."

"Why, Zella!"

"Looks as though someone appreciates my marvellous salesmanship, eh, what? But I've a good job—I'm in line for promotion—I'm undecided what to do about it."

"What does she offer you?"

"A drawing account of $75 a week . . . that's $20 more than I'm getting now . . . and 33 per cent of the profits. Of course," Zella added thoughtfully, "I told her I wouldn't give up a safe thing without at least an 18 months' contract."

"And you'd be your own boss?"

"Practically."

"It sounds wonderful to me." Judith's thoughts flew to the question of the apartment they had planned to share. If Zella were to earn what amounted to almost three times Judith's salary, would the idea of a mutual home still appeal to her?

SOCIETY GIRL

"If she brings her society friends around, as she guarantees to do, and if I can make a go of things, with them and their friends' friends, it would be quite okay," Zella reflected. "That being so, after the first 18 months, I'm to get 50 per cent of the profits of the shop."

"You wouldn't hesitate in grabbing such a chance?"

Judith was deeply interested. "Is she young?"

"Yes. A big spender, too. She's been coming in my department for a long time."

"She must have taken a fancy to you, Zella.'

"Fancy nothing. She thinks I'm a capable saleswoman.

"What's she look like?"

"And she's got all that money of her own to put into a business! I wonder what on earth she wants to do it for?"

"That's what I'd like to figure out, too. Is it a passing whim?" Zella knitted her forehead. "When I as much as asked her that, she gave me a seraphic smile and said she'd made a great discovery about herself—that she'd been running away from life for the past several years! 'And there isn't any happiness in not fulfilling yourself,' she said—and then gave me a harangue about some man who buried his 10 talents in the ground in a napkin, and they wasted away, and when he came to dig them up, there wasn't anything left of them!"

Synopsis

Judith Brian, young and pretty secretary in the Knickerbocker Bank, is attracted to Barry Deane, young executive. She is thrilled with the prospect of merely seeing him when summoned to his office. That night, she works late. Exhausted after a strenuous day, she almost faints in Barry's office. He insists that she rest awhile. For the first time, he is conscious of her beauty and longs to take her in his arms. Being with Barry, alone, seems like a lovely dream to Judith. To escape their drab surroundings, Zella, Judith's roommate, suggests that they lease an apartment.

The Young Men and Women Hebrew Association presented Caroline Hilmer, contralto, in a song recital in the Kaufmann Auditorium last night. The society has enlisted a devoted membership who help with the best response imaginable to all artists, and it must be a great satisfaction to perform for this audience.

Mr. Lissfelt

Mrs. Hilmer offered an exemplary program full of the best songs. She is at home in many tongues and sings with conviction. There is a nice polish to her work and it improves with her musicianship. It is only a pity that she refuses to recognize that great singers do not vocalize as she persists in doing. As a result her voice is growing smaller and losing its resonance; in songs like the Strauss or her operatic aria all force of music is lost in the absence of color, a condition which necessarily exists under such method of voice production.

This singer has always brought us unusual songs. The Cherubini and Purcell airs are really notable, and her group of French composers was imposing. A new song of Harvey Gaul, "Lanterns of Memory"—dedicated to Mrs. Hilmer, is tuneful. The Moussorgsky is trying in contrast, but had sincere touches.

The popular "Clavelitos" was archly played, and three encores decidedly attractive, Carpenter's "The Sleep That Flits on Baby's Eyes," "Shortnin' Bread," a good dialect song, and the German folk song "Zu Lauterbach."

OLD HOODOO UP AGAIN FOR BROOKLYN

THE EXISTING DOUBT as to the ability of Glenn Wright to hold up at shortstop for the Dodgers through the approaching season is reminding Flatbush scribes and fans that this particular position has been a hoodoo spot on the Brooklyn club for a couple of baseball generations. It is recalled that in 1912, Scout Larry Sutton passed up Rabbit Maranville in the New England League, saying he was too small. In 1913, Joe Tinker was bought from Cincinnati for $25,000 but jumped to the Federal League without ever donning a Brooklyn uniform. In 1914, Ollie O'Mara appeared to be filling the bill, but suffered a broken leg and never fully recovered his speed.

Glenn Wright

In 1917, Bunny Fabrique started out in sensational style and in June was actually leading the league in batting, but then he blew up and never came back. In 1922 the Dodger agents lost a race to the Giants for the services of Travis Jackson. In 1926, the Dodgers acquired Maranville, but let him go to the minors. He came back in brilliant fashion with another club.

EXCEPT FOR THE period of Ivan Olson's services from 1916 to 1924, the position has been a problem to the Brooklyn management ever since Phil Lewis, a one-time Pittsburgh high school player, dropped out after making good in the shoes of the great Bill Dahlen, in 1905-06-07-08.

Once they even brought old Kid Elberfeld back to fill the hole. Another time it was Dave Bancroft. Tommy McMillan was one more who passed in the parade, and among the others were Johnny Mitchell, Horace Ford, Johnny Jones, Ray French, Howard Freigau, Eddie Moore, Jake Flowers and Gordon Slade.

LEWIS WAS ONLY one of a number of diamond athletes from this section to wear Dodger garb around that time. There were stages when it looked almost like a Pittsburgh district club.

From 1905 to 1912 this region was represented on the Brooklyn club by Lewis, Jimmy Pastorius, Elmer Knetzer, Whitey Alperman, Tom McCreery, Otto Jordan, Brownie Gessler, Enos Kirkpatrick and Bob Coulson, and in later years by Gus Getz, Joe Schultz, Al Mamaux, Bill Doak, John Miljus and Jack Snyder.

THE PIRATES, ATHLETICS and several other big league clubs follow the policy of barring unsigned players from the spring workouts. Yankee rules are not so strict. Holdouts are permitted to take part in the practice sessions pending an adjustment of their salary differences. Joe McCarthy takes the view that inasmuch as they're all certain to sign in the end, they may as well spend the intervening time getting into condition. The only stipulation is that they pay their own expenses until they sign. And it's a safe guess they'll get that money back later.

Young Corbett

THE OCCASION OF many championship fights in the past 25 years, Washington's Birthday regains the place it used to hold on the fistic calendar with Jackie Fields defending the world welterweight honors against Young Corbett this afternoon in a 10-round bout in San Francisco.

This is the title that Jack Kearns and his associates have been passing around from one fighter to another in recent years. Kearns doesn't take many chances, so it's a question whether he has made a match which he knows is safe for Fields, or may have acquired an interest in Corbett and is letting the crown pass to the latter.

THERE IS ONE sport that celebrates its birthday today. That is dog racing. It is 13 years old today, in its present form, and doubtless there are some bettors who will tell you that the dog on which they wagered in the first race is just coming in.

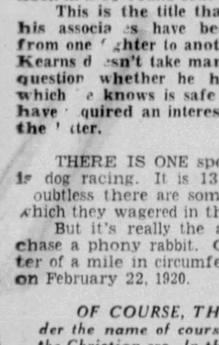
But it's really the anniversary of the game in which the dogs chase a phony rabbit. Owen P. Smith built the first track, a quarter of a mile in circumference, at Emeryville, Cal., and it was opened on February 22, 1920.

OF COURSE, THAT applies only to the modern sport. Under the name of coursing it can be traced back to a time before the Christian era. In the middles ages it enjoyed tremendous popularity in England. In the thirteenth century, King John frequently accepted greyhounds in lieu of money due the crown for grants, fines and forfeitures. Late in the sixteenth century Queen Elizabeth regularly was a spectator at the coursing of deer. Taplan, author of a sporting dictionary published in 1803, wrote that "coursing formerly extended to the deer, the fox and the hare, but is now confined to the hare." Coursing was introduced in California many years ago. Whippets, smaller than greyhounds, were first used, but were discarded when it was found the greyhounds were faster. When opposition developed to the chasing and killing of live rabbits, Promoter Smith invented the electrical bunny and introduced the present game. He made a fortune out of the patent and since his death his heirs have received millions in royalties. After the first track in Emeryville, Smith built others in Tulsa, East St. Louis, Chicago, Miami and Erlanger, Ky. At the last named track he cleared $500,000 in a 45-day meet.

NOWADAYS IT IS considered a remarkable period of activity in the boxing game if two world championship fights in different classes are held within a month of each other, even though in widely separated cities. Just imagine three in three days in the same ring.

That was the peak to which the fistic sport soared at the memorable time more than 40 years ago when the late Jim Corbett became heavyweight champion. None of the famous promoters who have operated since ever attempted any shows on that scale.

THOUGH CORBETT'S SENSATIONAL victory over the hitherto invincible John L. Sullivan overshadowed the remainder of the unparalleled bill, it was only part of a three-day Queensberry carnival that saw a title fought for on each occasion.



Jack McAuliffe

The scene was the arena of the old Olympic Club in New Orleans., and the dates were Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, September 5, 6 and 7, 1892. The crowd in attendance each day included a large party of Pittsburghers.

TWO OF THE reigning champions retained their titles while the third and greatest went down to defeat. On September 5, Jack McAuliffe successfully defended the lightweight championship by knocking out Billy Myer, the Streator Cyclone, in the fifteenth round. They fought for a purse of $9,000 and $5,000 a side. The class weight limit was then 133 pounds, ringside. It is now 135 pounds, about eight hours before fighting time. On September 6, George Dixon retained the featherweight championship by knocking out Jack Skelly in the eighth round. The purse was $17,500. The class limit then was 122 pounds, ringside. It is now 126 pounds, about eight hours before fighting time. On September 7 came the big wind-up, in which Sullivan was knocked out by Corbett in the twenty-first round, the purse being $25,000 with a sidebet of $10,000. Of the six principals in the three fights, only McAuliffe and Skelly are living. McAuliffe retired undefeated in 1893.

TARTANS FACE N. Y. U. QUINT TONIGHT

By JESS CARVER

The gaunt and clanky spectre of ineligibility hovers over the Pitt campus today, a number of the Panther elite being slated for the gate as the bogey men of the eligibility committee go into session today.

Among those mentioned as being due for suspension from further athletic competition this term are two members of Dr. H. C. Carlson's varsity floor squad, Claire Cribbs, star center, and Slim Wainio, reserve forward and considered the best shot on the squad. With Whitey Wilson suspended for the recent crack either he, or some other member of the Pitt squad took at Leo Mackey, the loss of Cribbs and Wainio will deal Dr. Carlson's team a right damaging wallop.

NICKSICK OUT

Two members of the frosh squad, Bill McCluskey and Wilson Brooks, have failed to return for school this semester and Mike Nicksick, Warren Heller's understudy at halfback on the football squad, also has dropped out of school.

Carnegie Tech's tossers are in New York today and tonight will take part, along with 13 other varsity teams in a monster benefit for the Mayor's committee for the Relief of the Unemployed in Madison Square Garden. The Tartans will meet New York University at 7 o'clock tonight.

This afternoon Cathedral College meets Brooklyn College; Long Island University takes on St. Francis, of Brooklyn; Columbus plays Williams, and Manhattan engages Villanova.

TO AWARD TROPHY

As an added impetus for good basketball a trophy will be awarded the team, judged by a committee of sports writers, which gives the best performance.

Coach Elmer Layden, delayed a day when the necessary equipment was found wanting, herded his Duquesne varsity and freshmen footballers together yesterday and inaugurated the 1933 spring football training session on the Bluff.

Layden had a squad of 35 on hand yesterday and sent them through a brisk session of loosening-up exercises, kicking and passing. No practice is listed for today, due to the observance of Washington's Birthday, but tomorrow the lads will be back for more work—all of 'em.

BOXERS AT WORK.

Joe Orsini, who instructs the lads at Pitt on the proper way to use their dukes, is having his boxers run six miles daily by way of getting them set for the important dual engagement with the Navy at Annapolis Saturday. You can't tell the boxers from the track men.

Dr. Carlson has elevated Donie Beck to a varsity traveling position on the court squad following the suspension of Whitey Wilson, and little Donie will accompany the team East for the games with Georgetown and the Middies. If Cribbs and Wainio are declared "out," there'll be a couple other of the reserves promoted.

The Tipoff

Elmer Layden, of the Duquesne (Elmer Laydens, is somewhat worried over his former backfield mate and close friend, Jimmy (Sleepy) Crowley, the new head football coach at Fordham. Elmer is wondering if Jimmy will be able to "take it" as a New York City football coach must.

They go great for the social side of coaching in Gotham. There, the newspaper boys, especially the football writers, when they haven't anything else to do, ring up a coach and get him cornered in a hotel suite or a lemonade joint and immediately an all-night session gets under way. Within the hour, the room is filled with smoke and arguments, and the one who slips away before time to hop a milk truck for a ride home is lucky.

Jimmy, according to Elmer, always has been used to living the more or less simple life. At East Lansing, where he's been coaching for the past few years, you can't do much of anything else. Besides, Crowley is such a wit and such good company, that the chances are he'll be worked overtime, and our Elmer is wondering what will be what.

From Dr. Andy Cutler, former Pitt center star (one of the best, too), now a practicing dentist in Aliquippa, comes an engraved announcement of the engagement of Dr. Andrew J. Salata to Miss Peggy Shannon—no, it should be, of the engagement of Miss Peggy Shannon, of New York City, to Dr. Andrew J. Salata.

Dr. Salata played a tackle at Pitt back in 1926, '27 and '28, and played it well. . . He's practicing dentistry now in East Orange, N. J. Dr. Cutler, this correspondent takes it, is of the opinion Dr. Salata is trying to put the high geezer on his pals hereabouts. Around here, the boys announce their marriages and let the engagements take care of themselves.

Coach Hank Day at Wash-Jeff will start early his task of developing an entire new backfield for his 1933 eleven. The Presidents are due to take to College Field early in March for start of spring training. There will be no curtailment in length of the spring grind, according to the Presidents' mentor, for he plans to drive the squad through at least five weeks of practice in laying the ground work for the fall of 1933—his second year at the helm of W. & J.

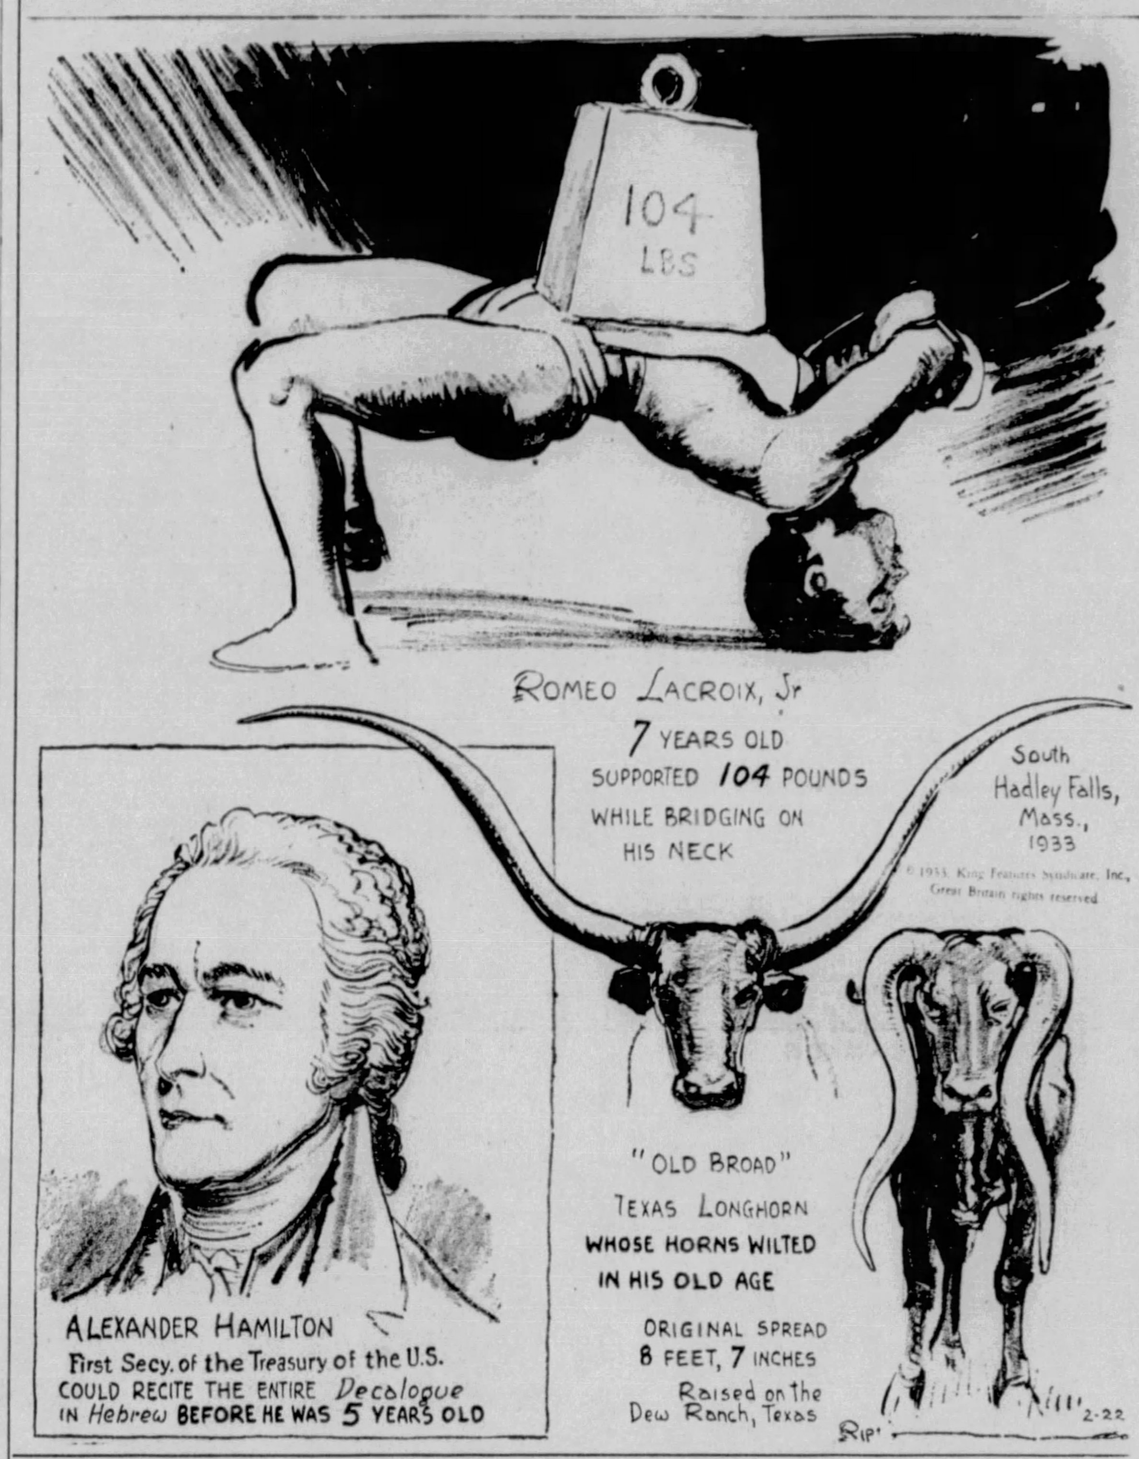
With the exception of two sophomores, W. & J.'s backfield was entirely depleted with the close of the 1932 campaign. Day's system, known for its high-powered offensive, is expected to display more strength next fall in a season that will see the Presidents playing one of their most difficult schedules, starting with Pitt in opening game of the year.

BELIEVE IT OR NOT

(Reg. by U. S. Patent Office)

By RIPLEY

(On request, sent with stamped addressed envelope, Ripley will send proofs and details of anything depicted by him in these cartoons.)



EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: A MASS MURDERESS—Susie Olah, a midwife of Szolnok, Hungary, was proved to have run a veritable poison factory to which no less than 105 murders have been traced. The bodies of 100 men were exhumed by the Hungarian authorities and found to contain enough arsenious oxide to kill a regiment. Forty-six women were charged with having administered the poison, with a view of expediting inheritances or promoting illicit love affairs. There are few pages of criminology more appalling than that which was unfolded during the trial of the 46 poisoners in the District Court of Szolnok, 1929-30. The defendants, who had acted strangely unperturbed during the trial, received the death sentences with stony silence. The chief culprit, Susie Olah, escaped earthly retribution by committing suicide. A TRIPLE CHAMPIONSHIP RECORD—John Gaddi, now a boxing referee, hung up an astonishing record when he participated in a boxing tournament on the occasion of the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary celebration of the city of Newark, N. J., in December, 1916. Fighting seven times in two nights, he won the national middleweight, light-heavyweight and heavyweight championships during the brief tourney. Gaddi, a World War veteran, is fortunate in having recovered from 17 wounds sustained in action. The above record easily is one of the greatest ever hung up in amateur ranks.

TOMORROW: A TRIBE OF UMBRELLA ADDICTS.

FIRST WORKOUT TO BE HELD TOMORROW

By CHARLES J. DOYLE
Staff Correspondent

EN ROUTE WITH PITTSBURGH PIRATES, Feb. 22.—Paso Robles beckoned today as the Pirate vanguard rolled along over California countryside toward the teams' training quarters where the arrival is scheduled for 6:30 tonight, Pittsburgh time. The athletes reached Los Angeles early this morning and after a brief pause at the big city they headed Northward on the last leg of the jaunt to the camp site.

The pitchers and catchers, officials of the team and others making up the first squad, landed in California in a fine mood. The long jaunt across the country was particularly enjoyable as the travelers encountered sunshine practically all the way, so it was a merry gang that spent the anniversary of Washington's birth on the day ride to Paso Robles.

FIRST DRILL TOMORROW

The first workout of the season will be held tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock, Manager Gibson announced today. In talking with his athletes, the Pirate skipper stated a meeting would be held at the club quarters in the Paso Robles Springs Hotel, shortly after the arrival. At that time Gibson will issue camp instructions concerning behavior, training rules, etc.

Two drills per day is to be the training routine, Gibson said. The pitchers and catchers are slated to get the benefit of a week's workout before the infielders and outfielders arrive, and by adhering to a double-header program Gibson expects to have his sharpshooters well on the way to condition when the batting drill start. Any hitting sessions of the coming week will be of a strictly informal nature, Gibby said:

"None of the hurlers like to pitch in their own batting sessions. Last year I threw so much I almost left my arm in Paso Robles. I won't be a sucker this year."

Gibson expects to work with full complement of pitchers and catchers in the opening drill tomorrow. Those batterymen who reside in California are expected to greet the Pittsburgh party when it docks at camp today.

LANDIS MEETS HONUS

A touching scene which had Judge Landis and Honus Wagner as its two actors and the Pirate advance squad as an audience took place on the desolate wastes of Arizona darkness last night.

The commissioner of baseball came to the village of Chandler weeks ago to recuperate his health. Black darkness hung over the town as the Pirate flyer halted. Bill Benswanger wired Landis that the Bucs were passing through and the Southern Pacific officials made arrangements to hold the train.

As the Pullmans came to a stop Benswanger, Manager Gibson and Wagner stepped into the desert. Landis was recognized partly by one of his quaint hats. He has long been an admirer of The Flying Dutchman and he was so glad to see Wagner back in the game he threw both arms around the veteran. The rookies looked on in admiration as Landis held Wagner in the fond embrace.

Steve Swetonic proposed a Pitt cheer for the judge and the boys let fly with it. Landis took off his hat and shouted:

"That will bring me up to Paso Robles."

Chilly Sauce

Grover Hartley, Pirate coach and a rare entertainer with string instruments, brought along a mandolin and guitar, but Grover is destined to do a lot of catching, what with only three receivers in camp. Grave, Paddeu and Finney are the only maskmen in the squad, but Hartley was a maskmman and he says he is "ready."

The whole tour to California was a new milestone in the life of one Honus Wagner. Honus signed so many autographs he will have to get the attention of the trainer before he can do his stuff on the diamond.

Honus has never lost his natural simplicity. He can wear a four-bit tie with admirable charm. Yesterday, Prexy Benswanger was alarmed when he couldn't find Wagner on the train over a period of two hours. When found, Honus was in a day coach regaling the less fortunate travelers. He also spent a nice half hour with the baggage car crew.

SEALS OFFER VARIED BILL

Just how great a fighter was the late Jim Corbett? What was his relative position to the other heavyweight champions? Was he the best, or just another champion?

Harry Keck, sports editor of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, discusses Corbett and his career, in the light of his recent death, as one of the features of the weekly radio program of the Trained Seals of the Sports Department over WCAE at 7 o'clock tonight.

Julius Levin, scholastic sports editor, reviews the basketball races in the high schools, now drawing to a close, along with the annual W. P. I. A. L. series, due to open Friday night.

A new number on the program will be the reading of a telegram from Charles J. Doyle, baseball expert with the Pirates, who reach their Paso Robles (Cal.) training camp tonight. Doyle will send flashes on the last-minute developments, and these messages will be a weekly feature until the Pirates return home.

Wally Steffen's Father Succumbs

SPORT VIGNETTES

Perhaps you noticed that the entries for the Kentucky Derby were published a few days ago . . . There are some interesting facts in connection with this annual blue ribbon event of the American turf . . . For instance, Ladysman is the Winter Book favorite at odds of 8 to 1, with the next choice, Kerry Patch, 12 points away at 20 to 1 . . . If Ladysman wins, it will be the first horse whose name begins with the letter L to capture the Derby in 34 years, the last having been Lieut. Gibson, in 1900 . . . . And it will be the first horse with a single word for a name to win since 1927, when Whiskery came through . . . Since then we have gone in for double and triple names, Reigh Count, Clyde Van Dusen, Gallant Fox, Twenty Grand and Burgoo King having won in order.

Ladysman is the favorite by virtue of having won five times and finished second twice in nine starts . . . Its victories include the Arlington Futurity, the United States Hotel Stakes, the Grand Union Hotel Stakes and the Hopeful Stakes . . . It ran second in the Saratoga Special and the Futurity, and its winnings total $111,435 . . . Kerry Patch was the winner of the Futurity at Belmont Park.

The old Baltimore Orioles have gone down in the story books as the toughest team in the history of baseball and maybe they were . . . Anyway, as Bill Corum reports it, Wilbert Robinson, the catcher, later manager of the Brooklyn club, says any time he got a broken or split finger he just stuck it in the dust to stop the flow of blood, so it wouldn't soil his uniform . . . Wonder how the New York Giants feel to be going away on a spring training trip without John McGraw somewhere in the vicinity?

Somebody asked Jim Jeffries what he thought was wrong with the fight game nowadays, and the old fellow replied that there isn't anyone around like Jim Corbett, who met them all, always was keen about winning and didn't worry about the gate.

Young Corbett, III, has been a long time getting his crack at the world welterweight title, and he ought to win it when he meets Jackie Fields at San Francisco this afternoon (along about 7 o'clock Pittsburgh time) . . . He beat Fields in a non-title bout in the same city exactly three years ago to the day, and they were rematched to fight for the championship last June, but Fields suffered an eye injury and canceled that bout . . . 'Tis said the eye trouble still remains, and that this is to be Jack-

Who's Who on Bucs Series Begins Tomorrow

Do you know the history of the various members of the Pittsburgh Pirates' baseball squad, how old they are, where they were born, how they broke into baseball, their hobbies, and other interesting details of their careers?

If you don't now, you will soon enough. Beginning tomorrow, the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph will publish a Who's Who series by Charles J. Doyle, its baseball expert, who is speeding campward with the club. The series is written in quiz fashion, making snappy reading.

Earl Grace, the catcher, sits for his biographical sketch in the first article. Watch for it on the sports pages tomorrow.

By JULIUS LEVIN

It begins to look very much as if Grover Washabaugh's crack South High School basketball team will complete its campaign in Section I of the City League not only as the section champion, but with an unbeaten record.

The South passers whipped Taylor Allderdice yesterday in the feature engagement of the City League, 30 to 20, to hang up their eleventh consecutive victory. Bill Jesko again led in the scoring with 13 points.

SOUTH HILLS WINS

In Section I, South Hills remained in the running for the title by defeating Oliver, 39 to 21, while the leader, Perry, was idle. A defeat for Perry in its final game Friday will throw the race into a deadlock and necessitate a play-off, provided South Hills takes its remaining game.

Ten champions are set in the W. P. I. A. L. as a result of last night's torrid action. In the other eight sections, the leaders will not be known until after Friday's games.

Other City League results yesterday resulted in a 21-to-14 victory for Langley over Vocational, a 33-to-20 win for Connelley over Peabody, a 33-to-16 victory for Schenley at the expense of Westinghouse and a 29-to-26 win for Allegheny over an improved Carrick team.

AMBRIDGE IN

Ambridge gained another title last night by defeating Aliquippa, 20 to 16. Monessen clinched the title by taking Monongahela, 18 to 16; Canonsburg defeated Trinity, 21 to 17, to win the gonfalon, and New Castle put Butler out of the running and clinched the flag by winning, 28 to 18.

Scottdale remained in a tie for the lead in Section X, with Connellsville, by beating Mt. Pleasant, 42 to 20, and Rankin kept pace with Scott in Section VIII, defeating Turtle Creek, 35 to 18.

In the Catholic High School League, the Duquesne Preps defeated St. Justin, 40 to 31, and St. Joseph downed St. Veronica, 27 to 14.

Duquesne University has announced that it will not sponsor a state Catholic high school championship tournament this year. The announcement was made by Athletic Director Elmer Layden after a meeting of the athletic council. It is hoped that the affair will be resumed next year.

CUNNINGHAM AGAIN VICTOR

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—Mile or half-mile it's all the same to Glenn Cunningham, sturdy flier from the University of Kansas.

After beating Gene Venzke twice in the Wanamaker and Baxter miles of the Millrose A. A. and New York A. C. games, Cunningham turned to a shorter route last night and defeated a crack field in a special 800-meter run which featured the Curb Exchange A. A. track and field meet.

The Kansan ran the metric equivalent of the half mile in one minute, 56 2-5 seconds, fast time for the unbanked, flat armory track on which the race was run. At the finish, Cunningham had a 10-yard lead over Glenn Dawson, of Oklahoma, with Frank Nordell, of New York University, third; George Bullwinkle, of the New York A. C., fourth, and Phil Edwards, Negro flash from McGill University, Montreal, fifth and last.

Aside from Cunningham's smashing victory, most of the fireworks were concentrated on the sprint series where Emmett Toppino, of New Orleans, and Ed Siegel, of New York, renewed their rivalry to the tune of three record-equaling performances.

Toppino, after tying the world record of 5.2 seconds for 50 yards in his qualifying heat, beat Siegel by two feet in the 70-yard final, equaling the world record of seven seconds flat. Siegel, who handed Toppino his first indoor defeat in the New York A. C. games last Saturday, won his 60-yard qualifying heat in 6.2, another record-equaling feat. Frank Wykoff, of Los Angeles, was third in the final and Ira Singer, of New York, fourth.

CARNERA CHALLENGED

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—Ray Impelletiere, of Cold Springs, N. Y., has filed with the New York State Athletic Commission a challenge to meet Primo Carnera. Hallak, heavyweight, and Steve Hallako, of Auburn, N. Y., has filed a challenge to box Tony Canzoneri, lightweight champion. Renatti Gardini, wrestler, has been reinstated.

LOCAL STARS HOLD OUT

Two prominent Pittsburgh minor leaguers have returned their contracts unsigned as a result of salary cuts. Merle Settlemire is displeased with the offer of terms by the Buffalo club of the International League, while Frank Packard has announced that he is not satisfied with the terms offered him by Baltimore in the same league.

The Edgewood team also was awarded the mythical national deaf schools' title last year, with Zuzworsky being picked for All-America center. Teams from New York, Rhode Island, New Jersey, Maryland, Virginia, Connecticut and Washington will compete here. The team has met some of the best Western Pennsylvania school fives this season. Geneva at West Virginia.
Westminster at Waynesburg.

Waynesburg's hopes of eventually getting a crack at the Tri-State Conference championship, which is all but tucked away in the Geneva College lockers, will be boosted no little tonight if the Jackets can defeat Westminster in the return clash at Waynesburg.

Earlier in the campaign, the Yellow Jacket lost by a single point to the Titans on the New Wilmington floor. A win for tonight will come as ample revenge.

Geneva resumes its strenuous campaign tonight by meeting West Virginia in a non-league affair at Morgantown.

WESTMINSTER WINS

BETHANY, W. Va., Feb. 22.—Westminster's late rally enabled the Titans to nose out Bethany here last night, 33 to 27. Bethany led early in the first half, only to have the United Presbyterians rally to knot the count at 13-all at the half and then stepped away to another lead in the second half, but Wesminser, led by Douglass and Newton, spurted to win. Wash U. Track Team Calls Strike

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—Members of the Washington University track and field squad have voted to "strike" because of the dismissal of Bob Doyle, track coach, in an economy move.

Approximately 45 of the university's 60 track athletes attended a meeting at which it was decided to strike. University officials refused to reverse their decision to drop Doyle at the close of the present semester.

Pirates Won't Sell Beer At Baseball Games

Asked today if the Pirates would sell beer at Forbes Field if the prohibition amendment is repealed, Sam Watters, secretary of the Pirates, uttered an emphatic "No."

The query was propounded in connection with a statement from New York that Col. Jacob Ruppert, owner of the New York Yankees, planned to sell beer at the Yankee Stadium. Watters said:

"Baseball and beer do not mix. And, besides, so far as Forbes Field is concerned, there is a stipulation in the purchase of the property rules against it."

VIEWS DIVIDED

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—(INS.)—Two of the cities which were strong for beer at the baseball parks in the dear old "pre" days today were reported ready to welcome it back under the grandstand or in the grandstand. They were Cincinnati and Milwaukee. St. Louis also was seen as regarding the return of bee-ah as a way out of a lot of red ink in the baseball ledgers.

From Cleveland came word that Billy Evans, business manager of the Indians, prefers to wait until beer is a fact again before discussing it.

The Brooklyn management said that the question of whether or not it sells beer is entirely up to Harry Stevens, the concessionaire, who can sell pink elephants if he wants to.

President Bob Quinn, of the Boston Red Sox, was noncommittal, and President Emil Fuchs, of the Braves, could not be reached for a statement.

HEYDLER OPPOSED

President John A. Heydler, of the National League, is utterly opposed to the idea. He says selling beer in the stands will work up the fans and lead to endless arguments and fights, as in the olden days, and baseball is better off divorced from the amber fluid.

Col. Jacob Ruppert, owner of the New York Yankees, who made his fortune as a brewer and is getting ready to turn on the vats again, started the discussion when he let it be known that preparations are being made to serve baseball with beer, or vice versa, at his ample Yankee Stadium this summer.

The Chicago Cubs, through Owner Phil Wrigley, said everything depended upon the demand. Said Wrigley:

CARRICK, PEABODY LOSE

The Pitt freshman and Taylor Allderdice swimmers scored victories in dual meets yesterday. The freshies defeated Carrick, 37 to 27, and Allderdice vanquished Peabody, 54 to 12.

LOCAL WOMAN MEETS BRITON

Mrs. Riley qualified yesterday with a card of 47-44—91.

Matching her medal-winning score of a year ago, Miss Frances Williams, of Allentown, Pa., playing in defense of her title, again topped the field with a card of 41-39—80. One stroke behind, in second place, was Miss Diana Fishwick, 1930 British women's champion, with 41-40—81.

LOCAL GOLFER WINS

PALM BEACH, Fl., Feb. 22—C. M. Scott, of Pittsburgh, is participating in the consolation flight semi-final of the Everglades Club invitation golf tournament here today. He is opposing Elmer Hich, of Chicago.

After being eliminated in the tournament proper, Scott returned to the competition in the beaten eight class and trounced Arthur Brown, of New York, 8 and 6.

Tommy Goodwin, 19-year-old New York state titleholder, was forced to sink his last putt in order to dispose of Stanley Heald, of Worcester, Mass., 2 up.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 22.—Slender Jackie Fields, of Los Angeles, is slated to put his welterweight crown on the block here this afternoon for some fancy bidding from Young Corbett, III, a husky product of California's raisin belt, the San Joaquin Valley.

The champion and challenger will go 10 rounds or less at Seals Stadium, the new plant of the San Francisco Pacific Coast League Baseball Club, before a crowd which promises to total around 20,000 and drop about $65,000 into the coffers of Promoter Ancil Hoffman.

The weather man says the fans will bask under a warm California sun.

CHALLENGER FAVORITE

Corbett is the magnet that draws 'em through the turnstiles here. He's the fair-haired lad of Northern California's fistic populace, and he's never lost a fight before his constituency.

Furthermore, neither he nor his public expects him to lose today, so he's a 10-to-8 favorite in what little betting there is. Odds which started out with the champion at 2 to 1 on the short end were driven down by Southern California money.

It will be the end of a long trail for Corbett; eight years of chasing a shot at the title during which he whipped Fields and another welterweight champion, Young Jack Thompson, in overweight bouts.

BOTH MEN CONFIDENT

Both contestants are confident and appear to be in tiptop condition, the titleholder claiming his eyes give him no trouble and that a training match cut on his nose is of no consequence.

The third man in the ring will be Lieut. Jack Kennedy, United States Navy, and he will put on display something new for referees in title bouts.

The doughty sea fighter will call the winner of each round and give out a summary at the end of the eighth session so that everybody will know just how everything stands.

HOUSTON, Tex., Feb. 22.—(AP.)—Tommy Cochran, Tyler, Tex., veteran, uncovered a magic putting touch and led the qualifying round of the annual Houston Country Club invitation golf tournament yesterday.

Conquering a strong East wind, Cochran blistered the par 36-35—71 Country Club course in 38-35—73.

Joyce Wethered At Work in Store

LONDON, Feb. 22.—The debate over her status as an amateur golfer was renewed today as Miss Joyce Wethered, four times British women's golf champion, began work in a local dry goods and sports equipment store.

Although Miss Wethered said she would advise on sports clothes and implements, and not demonstrate shots or give lessons, her amateur status has been questioned.

Miss Wethered has virtually abandoned competitive golf and refused to comment on the controversy.

Cochran Increases Lead Over Bozeman

Corbett Scaled Heights By Beating John L.

(This is the last of three articles on the ring career of the late Jim Corbett written by his long-time friend, Hype Igoe, the famous New York boxing critic.)

By HYPE IGOE,
International News Service.

Corbett thought the decision was a "draw" and when he called upon the club for his split of the $10,000, the president handed him $2,500. Corbett protested bitterly, but accepted the amount on advice of his lawyer.

Shortly afterward, John L. Sullivan passed through San Francisco on his way to Australia. Corbett's friends, in an effort to make up the other $2,500 which was due him from the California club, had arranged a benefit show for him in the Grand Opera House in that city. They suggested that Corbett ask Sullivan to spar with him. Jim offered John L. half the gate receipts and the Boston Strong Boy accepted. Several days later, he sent word to Corbett that they must box the scheduled four rounds in evening dress.

BOX IN FULL DRESS

Corbett protested that they would be razzed, but Sullivan had his way. When they walked out on the stage, both removed their dress coats and went to it. Corbett came back to Billy Delaney in his corner, after the second one-minute round and said:

"I can whip this fellow on the level. He hasn't got a thing. He's too slow to hit me a real punch."

Delaney cautioned:

Then and there Jim Corbett vowed he'd whip the mighty Sullivan. Exactly one year later, he accomplished the unbelievable by battering Sullivan into unconsciousness in 21 rounds. He often told me he could have turned the trick in three rounds had he not clung to a plan to fight carefully and wear down Sullivan gradually.

FIRST QUEENSBURY CHAMP

The defeat of Sullivan, of course, was the greatest triumph of modern pugilism. Corbett became the first champion under the Marquis of Queensbury rules. It was the first glove contest for the world heavyweight title. They fought at the Olympic Club, in New Orleans, for a purse of $25,000 and a $10,000 side bet, winner take all.

Corbett's first though after that battle was the $6,000 mortgage on his dad's property. He telegraphed asking him what his debts amounted to. The answer came:

The second great dream of Corbett's life came true, a whirlywind of ovations and acclaim! Meeting regulars and royalty. Dazzling tributes. A giddy, astounding ride on the wings of fame! Undreamed-of riches! The king is dead, long live the King!

CAREER AT END

He reigned a little less than five years. Came the great, rudy Bob Fitzsimmons, and that fateful St. Patrick's Day at Carson City, Nev. A brilliant victory suddenly turned into victory by a blood-bespattered, freckled devil of the ring with his "solar plexus" punch, the fame of which will live as long as boxing itself.

A "comeback" against Jeffries, who had in turn dethroned Fitz. Twice he met the bear-like Jeffries, and twice suffered bitter defeat. A bespangled ring career at an end!

Boxing Commission Office May Be Moved

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 22.—(INS.)—Following a meeting of the State Athletic Commission here yesterday, rumors were revived that the offices of that body will be moved from Philadelphia to Harrisburg in the interests of economy.

It was pointed out that in Harrisburg office space would be available rent free to the commission. Rent now is paid for offices in Pittsburgh and Wilkes-Barre, in addition to the main office here.

The commission announced that Phil Glassman would not be permitted to conduct any more wrestling shows until he clears up a mixup which caused an eleventh-hour cancellation of a show here last week.

HARRISBURG, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—A bill to permit 15-round boxing bouts in Pennsylvania was introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Steedle, of Allegheny County.

So saying, Lew Raymond, matchmaker of the Arena, completed his card for the weekly boxing show on the North Side, Friday night, by taking the Joe Rugguzzoni-Anson Green bout, originally scheduled for the windup of the canceled show at the Moose Temple tonight, and making it his opening bout.

It will be a six-rounder and will pave the way for three 10-round battles, featuring Tiger Joe Randall against Paulie Walker, Frank Novak against Jack Pallat and Billy Holt against Morrie Sherman. Walker hails from New Jersey, Pallat from Cleveland, and Sherman from Detroit. Rugguzzoni also comes from Detroit.

Between Rounds

The Motor Square Garden Club was busy yesterday running down reports of a plot to have one of the principals pull a run-out on Ito Ted Yarosz-Eddie (Kid) Wolfe windup for next Monday night on the old injured hand dodge. It has contacted the managers of both fighters and has received from them renewed assurance that there is no need for worry on this score.

The Garden is arranging a bout between Mose Butch and Midget Wolgast, the fly-weight champion, for one week from next Monday and intends to bring Barney Ross-Harry Dublinsky, Tony Herrera and Tony Falco back before the close of the indoor season.

Johnny Indrisano and Lou Bronillard meet in their third and "rubber" bout in the Boston Garden, Friday night. Al Mello boxes Tony Celli in a seven-round semi-final and Al Silva meets Young Pancho Villa in another bout on the card.

Joseph Triner, the new chairman of the Illinois Boxing Commission, seemingly knows his stuff. He is setting out to steal New York's thunder and make Chicago, aided by the World Fair this year, the boxing capital of the world. In addition to plugging for 15-round bouts, he is on record as demanding that boxers be given physical examinations to prove their fitness as soon as they are matched for a bout or as soon as they reach Chicago in advance of the bout, as well as just before they enter the ring.

Forbes

Washington, Like Others, Had Sorrows

By B. C. FORBES

HAVE YOU noticed that most men who have achieved much suffered much?

Take George Washington. He suffered the birth pangs of this nation more than any other leader. Wealthy though he was, circumstanced so that he could live a life of relative ease, he did not flinch from undergoing acute hardships, acute disappointments, acute sufferings. He verily passed through Gethsemane.

Mr. Forbes

No tribulations, no triumphs would seem to be the inoxerable law.

WHAT OF Lincoln? Did any mortal ever encounter more disappointments and defeats? His record of unattained objectives, thwarted ambitions, during the greater part of his life is perhaps unsurpassed by any outstanding figure in history. Had he known no sorrow, do you imagine for a moment that he would have won the place he did win in the hearts of his countrymen?

COMING TO business, is not the same truth abundantly illustrated?

John D. Rockefeller was perpetually harassed by debts all through his early days. The head of a Cleveland bank, from which the daring young oil operator had borrowed an alarming amount, stopped him on the street one day and said:

"Mr. Rockefeller, you have borrowed so much that I feel it my duty to bring the matter to the attention of the directors when they meet tomorrow."

"Good! I want to be there because I need more money."

POOR EDISON knew nothing but financial worries during the first half of his life. For years after he set up in business on his own account, he was plagued by creditors. His mind was so completely occupied by ideas and activities connected with inventions that his business methods were deplorably lax.

It is related that his "accounting system" consisted solely of two long spikes; whenever a creditor became irresistibly insistent upon being paid, Edison would take the bill from one spike, pay it, and then jerk it on the "paid" spike.

CHARLES M. SCHWAB was so impecunious during his early days in Carnegie's steel mill that when he grasped the need for conducting chemical and other experiments connected with the testing of iron and steel products, he had to ask Mrs. Schwab to give up her tiny sewing room.

His rise was phenomenally rapid; he became president of the billion-dollar United States Steel Corporation, which he was instrumental in inducing the late J. P. Morgan to organize, when he was only 39.

Later, he also trod Gethsemane. For 10 years after he quit the steel corporation and took hold of the picayune, decrepit Bethlehem Steel Company he had to wrestle against odds sufficient to dishearten the ordinary mortal.

During all that period, he locked up his mansion on Riverside drive, New York, never once occupying it. During all that period, also, he had to worry and sweat to finance his enterprise. Not a banker would lend Bethlehem Steel a dollar without the personal guarantee of Schwab.

AMONG OTHERS who had to battle against discouraging difficulties in their earlier stages were George Eastman, of kodak fame; Frank W. Woolworth, who had to close three of his first five stores; Henry Clay Frick, whose fortune was founded through being able to induce Banker Mellon, of Pittsburgh, Ambassador Mellon's father, to lend him $10,000 during the terrifice panic of 1873; Sidney Z. Mitchell, utility pioneer; John H. Patterson, of cash register fame; George Westinghouse, James J. Hill and E. H. Harriman, Robert Dollar, Minor C. Keith, Latin-American upbuilder; John Hays Hammond, famous mining engineer; Alexander Graham Bell—the list is endless.

AND WHAT of the most influential figure in all history, Christ? He was "a man of sorrow, acquainted with grief."

SO, WHY should you or I despair even if our burdens may seem for the moment heavier than we can bear?

TRADE URGED TO MODERNIZE PLANTS

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

In the sale of durable goods, the most effective sales argument is that the use of obsolete machinery is more expensive than the acquisition of efficient, modern equipment.

Mr. Rukeyser

In private business, as in government financing, it is fashionable to seek out self-liquidating projects. For example, the trade press chronicles how the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific Railroad made an annual saving of $10,348 in its signal department forces through installing two remote-control interlockings. They entailed an investment of slightly more than $27,000.

Likewise, a locomotive vendor urges railroad managers to substitute modern for inefficient and obsolete locomotives as a means of improving net operating income. Thus, it identifies its product with the goal nearest to the heart of management these days. The company points out that roads can reduce locomotive expense 25 per cent by replacing obsolete power with modern locomotives designed to suit the service for which they are to be used, supplemented by a systematic replacement policy which will renew the entire locomotive inventory at least once every 20 years.

Despite the current low state of business optimism, trade for the future is quietly piling up in the accumulating obsolescence of existing plant and equipment.

Individuals and corporations, which have temporarily at least turned their minds away from the ways of extravagance, are impressed by the argument that true economy requires replacement of equipment that is worn out or obsolete.

Andrew Carnegie was the first eminent captain of industry to set an example in the grand manner of scrapping obsolete plants as soon as more efficient methods became available.

STEEL OUTPUT HOLDS HERE

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—Iron Age says:

Steel ingot production for the country at large has declined this week to a shade under 19 per cent as the result of a combination of circumstances, chiefly a falling off in automobile tonnage, which has been offset only in part by an increase in releases by the Ford Motor Company. However, the flattening out of steel demand may also be ascribed to unsettlement over a weak price situation and the Michigan bank holiday.

The effect of smaller automobile specifications is most marked at Cleveland, where the ingot rate has declined from 38 to 35 per cent, but is also evident in the valleys.

Steel ingot production is sustained at Pittsburgh, Wheeling, Chicago and in nearly all other districts. Meanwhile, the Colorado rail mill is starting up on a recent order from the Santa Fe.

The immediate outlook for the steel industry is still uncertain owing to the lack of a substantial volume of new building work, the almost complete absence from the market of the railroads and the indefiniteness of automobile schedules after this month.

Miscellaneous consumers of steel have contributed most of the gains that have occurred in bookings of some steel products.

Price stabilization is the focal point of steel companies' activities. Considerable has already been accomplished through the determination of several producers to stop further concessions, and some outright advances are in prospect, particularly in sheets, in which recent price declines were most marked.

Earmarking Cuts U. S. Gold Supply

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—A net loss of $12,720,600 was shown in the nation's monetary gold stocks in yesterday's report of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

Imports exceeded actual exports, but there was another decrease caused by earmarking of gold for foreign account, presumably for the account of the Bank of England.

McKeesport Tin Plate Holds Profit at High Level

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

AT LEAST ONE organization came through the depression period and still was able to show a substantial profit for 1932. McKeesport Tin Plate Company reported net profit for the year of $1,503,088 or $5.01 a share on 300,000 shares of capital stock. Profit for the year included the company's share in the earnings of the Metal Package Corporation.

Net profit in 1931 was $1,963,029, which was equivalent to $6.51 a share on the stock. This compared with $2,503,897 or $8.35 a share in 1930, the record year for earnings of this organization.

An exceptionally stable demand for tin plate from makers of containers for food and other products was the principal contributing factor toward the maintenance of McKeesport Tin's earnings during 1932.

Stocks Of Canned Goods Are Sold

SURPLUS STOCKS of canned goods were reduced to low levels during 1931 and 1932. A great majority of the products packed in cans are indispensable in our daily lives. This makes it unlikely that any further reduction in output of importance is to take place.

Prices of tin plate were reduced 50 cents a base box of 100 pounds at the end of 1932. This was largely compensated for by reductions in the price of pig tin and of semi-finished steel, the principal products used in the manufacture of tin plate. As a result, the price of the finished product should not prove to be an unfavorable influence on earnings during the present year.

* * *

Current Position Remains Strong

THE COMPANY IS in an excellent financial position. Current assets amounted to $5,004,092 at the end of 1932. Cash stood at $2,741,975.

The organization has no preferred stock or funded debt outstanding. The entire capital liability is represented by 300,000 shares of stock.

Operations are concentrated at a single plant near McKeesport, which is one of the largest tin plate mills in the world. In addition the company has a controlling interest in the Metal Package Corporation which is engaged in the production of tin containers of all kinds.

FURTHER POWER GAIN SHOWN

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—Electric power production for the United States during the week ending February 18 last continued to show improvement, with the output only 4.9 per cent under that of the corresponding 1932 week.

During the week ended February 11, the comparable decline was 6.1 per cent.

Production for the February 18 week, the report stated, totaled 1,469,732,000 kilowatt hours, against 1,482,509,000 in the week ended February 11. For the corresponding week last year, which ended February 20, the figure was 1,545,459,000.

The Pacic Coast region showed the best gain last week. With percentage of decline under the 1932 week stnding at 7 per cent compared with 8.4 per cent in the February 11 week. New England's output declined 5.1 per cent, awainst 5.7; the Atlantic Seaboard was 4.6, against 4.2, and the central industrial district was 6.9, against 6.5.

PRICES STEADY IN LONDON

LONDON, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—The tone of the Stock Exchange was more cheerful owing to the renewed demand for gold mining stocks, oil shares and trans-Atlantic issues, all of which improved. Chinese and Japanese bonds were better on moderate repurchases, but gilt-edged securities were dull on drooping sterling exchange. The market closed steady.

PARIS, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—Trading on the Bourse was nervous and prices were irregular, declining under weakness in foreign issues and selling. The closing was heavy.

CORPORATE EARNINGS

Public Service Corporation of New Jersey reports for the year ending January 31 gross earnings of $124,292,509, a decrease of $12,264,799 under the previous year. Operating expenses were $82,078,821, a decrease of $8,953,168. After all deductions, the balance for dividends and surplus for the year was $27,478,464, a decrease of $3,252,612 as compared with the year before.

Marshall Field & Co. announced today a loss for 1932 of $7,987,200 compared with $5,144,400 in 1931, but said its position had strengthened during the last half of the year. Profit for the fourth quarter of 1932 was $123,700. Sales were $78,267,800 last year, a decrease of 31.6 per cent from 1931. Operation of the merchandise mart, which the company controls, showed a loss of $408,000.

Link-Belt Company reports a net loss of $970,120 for 1932 against a net income of $638,973 after federal taxes for 1931.

Washington Tributes On Air

Washington's birthday on the air brings a gala billing of musical and dramatic presentations to Pittsburgh dialers. Among tonight's radio offerings is a reproduction over KDKA at 10:30 of a concert which Washington attended in Philadelphia June 12, 1787, with Rupert Hughes, famous novelist and biographer of the first President, as guest speaker. Mr. Hughes has chosen for his topic, "Washington's Message to Our Day."

In line with the holiday observance, the Five Star Theater presents a dramatization of Margaret E. Sangster's story, "Portrait of Washington," on KDKA at 7:30. A brief curtain speech by the author also is listed.

Opera Debut

"A Night in Old Paris," a new one-act opera by Henry Hadley, noted American composer and conductor, has its world premiere over WCAE tonight at 9 during a special concert directed by the composer. Seven prominent soloists—Viola Philo, soprano; George Rasely and George Trabert, tenors; Theodore Webb and Phil Dewey, baritones, and Frank Cuthbert and Jay Alden Edkins, bassos—present the work. The broadcast also marks the radio premiere of Hadley's tone poem, "The Ocean."

Celebrating her second anniversary on the air, Nellie Revell, radio raconteur, brings a group of old-time song writers to the microphone on WCAE at 11 p. m. The pre-Tin-Pan-Alley age composers are Harry von Tilzer, who wrote "Wait 'Til the Sun Shines, Nellie;" Gus Edwards, "School Days;" Theodore Metz, "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight;" James Thornton, "When We Were Sweet Sixteen;" W. C. Handy, "St. Louis Blues;" Rosamond Johnson, "Under the Bamboo Tree;" Joe Howard, "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now," and Harry Armstrong, "Sweet Adeline."

The first of this week's American Weekly dramas, "The Flower of Fate," with Suzanne Caubaye, internationally-known French actress, in the leading role, is offered on WCAE tonight at 6. Hot-cha!

Mary Garden Wants to Sing With Rudy; Jack Benny May Replace Jolson

By AIRCASTER.

The sudden resolve of the jovial Jolson to leave the radio flat seems sudden only with the mammy singer. I have a faint memory of having asserted that Jolson wouldn't renew with his sponsor, if indeed, he should remain for the run of his contract.

Now, from the looks of things, Al won't even get an opportunity to say goodbye to the radio customers, for it is reported his radio bosses are so peeved that he is unlikely to go on the air Friday.

Jolson is somewhat incapacitated by a cold; he yearns for Florida and the sun-baked sands, from which point radio wire charges are sufficiently prohibitive to irk a sponsor and to discourage an artist.

Indeed, Frank Black, of NBC, is conferring at this moment with the Jolson patron about putting Jack Benny in the Jolson spot, and building a variety show about him and using the voices of the Countess Albani and Irene Taylor for affording the necessary musical nuances.

Mary Garden, in a recent interview, admitted that her secret ambition is to sing jazz with Rudy Vallee's orchestra. . . . Well, why don't they book her?

* * *

George Olsen's motorcar sponsor deserts the Saturday night waves April 1, and Paul Whiteman's sponsor of the same family, will quit the air February 27—or at least, will not renew with Whiteman, which partly explains the Whiteman tour.

* * *

Hal Kemp, youthful Southern maestro who clicked with Pittsburgh dancers at the William Penn Hotel, will replace Harry Sosnick on the CBS-WJAS Sunday night feature, "Parade of Melodies," beginning this week. With Kemp and his orchestra, which has won international fame, will be Josephine Haynes, soprano who recently returned from National Opera starring in Panama; the Neal Sisters, Bill Miller, tenor, and the Four Norsemen Quartet.

Globe-Trotting

With the Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

Charles Kean, of Derry, has one for the globe trotters. He says that three years ago someone robbed his store. The occurrence almost had been forgotten when the other morning a young man from a neighboring town confessed the deed, stating that his conscience gave him no rest. He offered to make restitution and Mr. Kean feels that a troubled conscience is worse punishment than jail.

MORAL—Let your conscience be your guide.

In these puzzling times your nimble brain will have no difficulty in answering Milan Gvoich's problem: A wife is 12 years younger than her husband; the daughter is half as old as the mother; the combined age is 100 years. How old is each one?

* * *

"Hello, cousin," will be the familiar greeting at the Hoover's in Sheridan Saturday. The grandsons and granddaughters of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Michael Hoover, West End pioneers, will have their first family get-together.

* * *

There are millions of old halves around over 100 years old. The only dates that are rare are 1794, 5, 6, 7, 1815, 36, 38, 53, 78. The mint mark is expensive only on an 1838 piece.

Corbett Eulogy, Pirate 'Dope' By Seals

A talk on the late Jim Corbett and his place in the fistic world by Harry Keck, sports editor of the Sun-Telegraph, and flashes from the Pirates' training camp at Paso Robles, Cal., wired by Charles J. Doyle, Sun-Telegraph correspondent, feature the Trained Seals' broadcast on WCAE tonight at 7 o'clock. A review of the scholastic basketball races by Julius Levin, Sun-Telegraph sports writer, also is heard.

News flashes by Louis L. Kaufman, Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News, are broadcast today on WCAE and WJAS at 9:05 a. m., 12:15 p. m. and 6:30 p. m. and on WJAS at 2:15 p. m.

Magic Tenor Star In New Program

A new weekly series of programs starring the Magic Tenor, an unidentified vocalist; the Round Towners quartet, and an instrumental quartet made up of Sam Prager, pianist; Sam Herman, xylophonist; Chester Hazlitt, saxophonist, and Abe Goldman, accordinionist, is inaugurated on WJAS tomorrow at 11:30 a. m.

ABORTING a Cold

It's just a waste of time taking a cold remedy that can only relieve. To end your cold, abort it. The lemon juice treatment will do it. Squeeze two full-size lemons in a large glass of very hot water and drink without sugar. First, take three tablets of Pape's cold compound an hour apart. This clears the head, dries the nasal passages, reduces any fever. The lemon juice then drives all cold symptoms right out of the system. Bedtime is best. This treatment will abort, the worst cold, overnight. One cold compound tablet will check a cold at any time, for several hours; then when night comes you can get rid of it by abortion. Any druggist has Pape's cold compound. It's perfectly safe. Try it, and you'll never go back to half-way remedies.

CARNEGIE'S 'GOSPEL OF WEALTH' CREATED SENSATION

Ironmaster Thought It Disgrace to Die With Great Wealth

FROM THE LIFE OF ANDREW CARNEGIE
by BURTON J. HENDRICK

Abridged for exclusive publication in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, by special permission of Mrs. Andrew Carnegie

In May, 1889, Carnegie wrote an article, which he called simply "Wealth," and sent to the North American Review. A few hours afterward Mr. Allen Thorndike Rice, the editor, made a sudden appearance in Carnegie's library. He held the manuscript in his hand and his excitement was manifest.

"It is the finest article I have ever published in the Review," said Mr. Rice. "I promised Lord Wolseley first place in the June number, but this will lead the magazine."

"The day is not far distant," wrote Carnegie, "when the man who dies leaving behind him millions of available wealth, which was free for him to administer during his life, will pass away 'unwept, unhonored, and unsung,' no matter to what uses he leave the dross which he cannot take with him. Of such as these the public verdict will then be: 'The man who dies thus rich dies disgraced.' Such, in my opinion, is the true gospel concerning wealth, obedience to which is destined some day to solve the problem of the rich and the poor, and to bring 'Peace on earth, among men good will.'"

Letters came to Carnegie in shoals, for the most part approving his course. One has unusual interest.

From Rockefeller

26 Broadway, New York.
January 29, 1896.

My Dear Mr. Carnegie:

. . . I am pleased with the sentiments you give expression to. I would that more men of wealth were doing as you are doing with your money; but, be assured, your example will bear fruits, and the time will come when men of wealth will more generally be willing to use it for the good of others.

I had intended to call upon you to express my appreciation, or I would have written before.

Very truly yours,
JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER.

At the time the "Gospel of Wealth" appeared, Carnegie was rich, but not superlatively so; compared with his subsequent fortune he was almost poor. One of the most interesting of his papers is an inventory of his assets, drawn up on January 1, 1890. This discloses among other things the extent to which he had observed his favorite maxim, to "put all his eggs in one basket and then watch the basket." He possessed practically no stocks and bonds, except those representing his interest in the Carnegie steel works and enterprises closely related to them. Almost the only outside stocks were holdings in his English newspaper companies—his "wild oats"—of which, about this time, he disburdened himself by presenting them, as free gifts, to his old associates. His liabilities were mostly his so-called "trust accounts." It had already become his practice to take the savings of friends and hold

WRITER SHUNS MATRIMONY

Richard Halliburton, romantic adventurer and author, is not in love, won't get married until he is old and tired of traveling, but when he does, will live in France.

So he declared yesterday after his lecture at Kaufmann's, where he spoke on his latest book, "The Flying Carpet." He autographed copies of his works. His address was informal and consisted mostly of stories and incidents taken from his book.

Mr. Halliburton declared:

"I feel that marriage would certainly tie me down. Although I do not contemplate another adventure at present, I do not intend to get married until I am tired of traveling. And when I do settle down, I intend to live in France at least six months of the year."

FLIERS SMASH RECORDS HERE

Pittsburgh pilots enjoyed a field day in yesterday's high winds, breaking time records for the passenger flight from this city to Washington. The record was broken three times, the final time for the trip over Pennsylvania Airlines officially recorded as one hour.

Pilot Bud Baker up until yesterday held the record, his time being 80 minutes. Edward (Red) Cupples, flying trip 2, which left Pittsburgh at 9:30, made the flight in 73 minutes. Lowell Scroggins, leaving at 3:15 on flight 4, lowered this time with a new record of 71 minutes, but at 6:05 p. m. Jack Neal, on trip 6, made the distance in one hour flat.

The gale approximated 50 to 60 miles an hour at high altitudes yesterday, the pilots reported.

POTTERS GIVING 'BUY U. S.' FETE

Members of the Brotherhood of National Pottery Operatives will hold a "Buy American" dinner tonight in East Liverpool, O., at which pottery makers, civic, fraternal and other organizations will be represented.

V. V. Kelsey, chairman of the "Buy American" program of the American Ceramic Society, will speak on the advantages to manufacturer and worker and citizen of the campaign to buy and sell American made goods.

Among the guests will be W. E. Wells, Jr., of the Homer Laughlin China Company, of Newell, W. Va., whose plants recently reopened to 300 men, due, according to Wells, to "Buy American."

Latest innovation among the "Buy American" advocates will be a "Buy American" ball, to be held April 18 by the South Hills Social Club, Theodore Brandtone, president. The ball, an annual event for the club, will be featured by the selection of the "All American" girl. It will be held in Brentwood Park, with Burgess A. G. Kaufmann a judge.

Gargoyle Club Show For Injured Youth

E. Bruce Hill, Jr., Princeton student injured in an automobile accident last March, will be honored with a special full-dress performance of the Gargoyle Club's current play, "Alias Jimmy Valentine," Saturday morning in his home at 1205 Heberton street.

The public performance will be given Friday night in the Shady Side Academy gymnasium. Hill was the first Gargoyle leading man in a production in 1924.

MY BEST WAR STORY

629 Dunmore Street,
East Liberty
(A Company, 315th Machine Gun Battalion.)

During the second drive of the 80th Division, in the Meuse-Argonne battle, I was a sergeant with Company A, 315th Machine Gun Battalion. October 9, 1918, we had followed the first wave of infantry through the enemy barrage in the attack at Madeline Farm (north of Nantillois).

Just at dusk some infantrymen were lining up about 60 German prisoners to be taken to the rear. As we were passing, an enemy plane dived toward us and dropped several flares.

We immediately got all the boys on the run with their heavy guns to try to reach the opposite side of the field. I had dropped behind to urge on a slow-footed buddy, when enemy shells began falling. I saw three fall among the prisoners. I told the straggler he would have to shift for himself as I ran across the field.

I heard a lot more shells exploding behind me, and shortly the slow lad raced up yelling:

"Sergeant! Sergeant! Look! Look!"

I turned toward him as he pointed to where a piece of shrapnel had hit. His face had turned gray. His right sleeve from the shoulder to the wrist was red and wet. I stopped to look at his wound.

On moving his pack I burst into a roar of laughter. He had stolen a can of tomatoes, hid it in his pack and the shrapnel had cut it wide open without even giving him a scratch.

(The foregoing story was a prize-winner in the "My Best War Story" contest being conducted by veterans of Allegheny County. True accounts of war experiences may be mailed by veterans, relatives and friends to the "Best Story" Committee, Fulton Theater, Sixth street, Pittsburgh. They must not exceed 300 words. The winner each day will be awarded four tickets to the theater's showing of the war film, "The Big Drive.")

OPIUM UPHELD AS EVIDENCE

The petition of Katherine Lilly, alias Kitty M. Clayton, 30, of North Dithridge street, for suppression of evidence of approximately 300 grains of smoking opium, alleged found in her possession by government narcotic agents, was denied by Federal Judge F. P. Schoonmaker. Mrs. Lilly and Patrick Nee, 60, of Beechview, are listed for trial next week, under the government narcotic law.

Mrs. Lilly maintained the seizure and her arrest were illegal.

Narcotic agents testified they saw Nee leave a Chinese store in Third avenue and hand a small package to Mrs. Lilly, waiting in an automobile near Third avenue. After the arrests, they said, they found the smoking opium in the pocket of her dress.

Later, the agents asserted they found a smoking set and pipe in Mrs. Lilly's apartment in North Dithridge street, having entered by her permission.

BULLET VICTIM GIVEN BLOOD

WINTER HAVEN, Fla., Feb. 22.—(AP.)—Mrs. E. E. Frederick, who was shot here last Thursday, was given a blood transfusion yesterday and physicians said later they were optimistic over her chances for recovery.

Mrs. Edna Leslie, the girl's mother, arrived here and expressed the opinion to authorities that her daughter was mentally irresponsible. She said Miss Leslie had undergone psychopathic treatment in the North for several years and had come to Florida for her health.

MATTERN HOPS ON TEST FLIGHT

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—Jimmie Mattern, birdman who nurses an undying ambition to whirl around the globe in record time, took off from Floyd Bennett Air Field at 4:49 a. m., eastern standard time, on a non-stop "limbering up" hop to San Angelo, Tex.

The jaunt, a 1,650-mile one, was the first big test for Mattern's rebuilt plane, the Century of Progress."

Mattern said he hoped to reach San Angelo, his home town, in about 12 hours, flying by way of Pittsburgh, Louisville, Little Rock and Fort Worth.

FENCE DISPUTE ENDS IN FINE

An argument over a sheet iron fence ended before Magistrate Ray E. Schneider today when William Newell, 30, of 2511 Perrysville avenue, was fined $10, with the option of 10 days in jail, on a charge of disorderly conduct.

The hearing climaxed a year's discension between Newell and his next-door neighbor, Mrs. Mary Alba, 2513 Perrysville avenue, it was testified. Newell, according to Mrs. Alba, built the fence beside his back porch so that it partly shut out the sunlight from the Albas' kitchen window.

Monday night's high wind tore part of the fence loose and banged it against both houses, keeping the Albas, Newell and his sister, Josephine, awake. Early yesterday the argument started, it was testified. Attempting to strike Mrs. Alba with a piece of sheet iron, according to her daughter, Theresa, 17, Newell struck his sister, who telephoned the police and then collapsed.

Newell testified today that Mrs. Alba struck his sister with a 20-pound hammer. She was discharged by Magistrate Schneider.

Andrew Carnegie's Life Story

By BURTON J. HENDRICK

them subject to interest. He thus constituted himself a kind of savings bank, only that he granted his depositors far higher rates than prevailed in the open market. These providers for the rainy day, in fact, obtained annual returns ranging from 6 to 30½ per cent. The security back of these trust funds was ample, for Carnegie always gave his personal obligation—which meant that his entire fortune guaranteed each beneficiary. The scheme was simply Carnegie's method of assuring a high return, with perfect safety of principal, to inexperienced investors. In subsequent years the roll grew to great proportions and included some of the best known and highly placed of Americans—and especially their widows.

Worth $30,000,000

This inventory summarizes Carnegie's fortune in 1890 at $15,317,514.81. As his holdings in the Carnegie enterprises are most conservatively appraised, probably double these figures would give a close approximation to his wealth. His statement to Gladstone, recorded in the latter's diary, that his income, in 1887, was $1,800,000, would indicate a capital value not far from $30,000,000. Such was the amount that Carnegie had now pledged himself, in the most public fashion, to give away in his lifetime, leaving his dependents only the provision necessary for comfortable maintenance. Did he really mean it? On this point there was general skepticism. The thing was simply too much for human belief. To all these questions, propounded by reporters and others, Carnegie always made the same reply:

"Wait and see!"

The year 1892, auspiciously as it began, was to prove an especially painful one in Carnegie's life. Until then his course had been uniformly prosperous and benign. The recriminations that automatically dog the favored Carnegie was seldom called upon to endure, for the speculative methods too frequently used in modern business played no part in building up his wealth. In a single aspect did Carnegie's name, during this active period, figure as a "portent," and that was as the beneficiary of a high protective tariff. Since this identical charge could be leveled at every American steel maker, and, in fact, every American industry, the criticism was hardly personal in character but was rather a general indictment of the policy which the United States, for good or ill, had fixed upon as most favorable to its economic development. Outside of this accusation, heard mainly during Presidential campaigns, Carnegie had escaped the lash of popular disfavor, but the events of the summer of 1892 brought a new and disquieting note. A terrible strike, accompanied by riot and murder, broke out on the banks of the Monongahela and gave the peaceful name of Homestead a calamitous distinction which it has not yet lived down.

Few Disagreements

The labor troubles of this era were by no means confined to Western Pennsylvania. Carnegie's properties had pursued their way for a generation far more harmoniously than most of their neighbors. In fact, from their origin in 1861 until the winter of 1887, there had been few serious disagreements. Even the mighty labor upheavals of the 10 years preceding 1888 had left the Carnegie mills unscathed. In this decade labor riots had nearly destroyed certain railroads, including the Pennsylvania, and reduced the coal areas almost to a heap of ruins, but the Edgar Thomson and the Pittsburgh works had survived unharmed. One reason perhaps was that the Edgar Thomson, from the beginning, dealt with its workmen through the union then powerful in the steel centers. When Carnegie's rail mill opened its doors in 1875, an old fashioned puddlers' group, the Sons of Vulcan, exercised an influence almost supreme. Carnegie, a believer in the rights of labor, established diplomatic relations with this organization. In 1876 the Sons of Vulcan became incorporated with a union of far wider scope, the Amalgamated Association, and Carnegie made his arrangements with the new overlord. The quiet that prevailed for nearly 15 years at Braddock furnished a refreshing contrast to the turbulence that distracted so many rivals. The builders of the new Homestead mill collapsed because of perpetual warfare with their artisans, and the Duquesne works, put up under similar conditions, went on the rocks for the same reason. It was because their propectors failed in this indispensable regard that both mills, after a year or two of struggle, passed into Carnegie's hands. The rows with workmen now ceased and great profits piled up in place of the old losses. The experiment, twice repeated, apparently proved that the Carnegie regime possessed the gift of living happily with its employes.

A New Epoch

The late eighteen eighties, however, ushered in a new epoch. For the first time the American proletariat became, in the lingo of the present day, "class conscious," and the principal of universal combination, as a means of obtaining a larger share in the earnings of production, swept the country. Previously labor unions had been local entities, each concerned with its own trade, but now the idea of federalization, if linking together all workers in nation-wide organizations, gained rapid momentum. Two such continental leagues, the Knights of Labor and the American Federation of Labor, were daily becoming more comprehensive. Both disclaimed the use of violence, but incendiary outbursts commonly accompanied their uprisings.

In 1886, when a great railroad strike kept Chicago in a state of terror for several days, these manifestations reached an especially destructive size; the bomb throwings of a group of German radicals, resulting in the death of several policemen and bystanders, now informed a startled American people that they were face to face with the most serious industrial crisis in their history. The relationship of capital and labor, and the general subject of working class amelioration, was one of the most popular themes in the press and on the platform. The future of the American fabric disquieted many thinkers and the time-honored references to the French Revolution played their usual part in the forebodings.

That Carnegie would be heard from when matters of this sort were occupying the public mind may be taken for granted. He had a better right to speak than most observers; as the employer of nearly 15,000 men he had a practical insight into social problems that few controversialists possessed. Moreover, he was widely known for his sympathetic attitude toward manual toilers, and his approach, it could be assumed, would have a human quality not always anticipated from leaders of his station.

"Thou shalt not take thy neighbor's job" — this telling phrase summed up Carnegie's condemnation of the current practice of putting new employes in the place of striking workmen—and it represented a conviction from which he never departed. It involved that personal attitude which Carnegie always maintained toward his force. He believed that a friendly, even a familiar, relationship was the best protection against the worst evils inherent in a large rolling mill. That his workmen always referred to him behind his back as "the little boss" and even as "Andy," he looked upon as a positive asset.

Last Saturday the stage units directed by Josh Dreano which have been offered for the amusement and enjoyment of the members of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club were discontinued and the time allotted to these units will be used to show the youngsters more comedies and short subjects. Many of the theaters will again present one-act sketches by the members.

One of these sketches will be presented by the members of the Arsenal Chapter this Saturday. At the meeting last week the members elected John Hilliard head of the entertainment committee.

The program which he will present this week will have the following members in the cast: Helen Sherry, Francis Kane, Betty Richards, Alberta Fundi, Minnie Fundi, Josephine Lang, Thomas Hart in songs and dances and the comedian will be John Hilliard and Stanley Kane.

The Cup of Joy

Golf is now the recognized method of curtailing outdoor enjoyment. There are five or ten million citizens picking up in the rough and teeing up on the putting greens.

Their teeth are gritted in porcelain agony. Their brows are wrinkled like underwear in a traveling bag. They are bulging with suppressed athletic emotion as they try to drop a short putt into the entrance of a woodchuck mine.

This putting business is all out of proportion to the rest of the game. From the minute you start loose you are swinging like a lumberjack earning a bonus. All your swipes are wild arcs with plenty of muscle. You smack trees, fences and players. You carom off barns. You ricochet off hills.

You sandblast out of bunkers and dynamite your way out of weeds. Suddenly you are on the green and you are forced to

That's why we think Gene Sarazen is correct when he says make the cup eight inches from stem to stern. An eight-inch cup would mean a circumference of 25 inches and a fraction.

A little smaller than a cake dish, but not quite so large as a butter tub. But what an improvement for us elbowish golfers. We could throw away our lead pencils and reduce our life insurance.

It would improve the game for any dufferoo could drop the ball in an eight-inch cup as easy as kicking a frog off a wharf. They tell us the golf commission is set against the big cup on the theory that we would enjoy the game.

Of course, the big cups would be dangerous for nearsighted putters in heavy rainstorms. They're liable to fall in. And indignant opponents could claim the match simply by sitting in the cups and refusing to come out until you revised your bookkeeping.

However, we must take our chances with that end of it. But we want the big, oversized bowls, nevertheless. Us fivers and sixers on the greens would like to absorb the thrill that arrives with sinking a 30-foot dribbler.

And if Gene wants a 10-inch cup we are willing to compromise on that too.

Nation Wants Prompt Repeal; Let States Speed Ratification

Actuated by the good example of the Senate, the House of Representatives of the Seventy-second Congress voted overwhelmingly in favor of immediate repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. With two-thirds majority required for affirmative action, the reform element in the lower house produced all of that, and a margin of sixteen repeal votes to spare.

The repeal amendment now goes to the forty-eight states, to be voted upon by conventions elected in each state.

So it comes to pass that, after thirteen years of hypocrisy and tyranny and crime, the free people of this country are to tell their lawmakers whether or not they ever wanted prohibition at all.

In point of fact, however, the people themselves had long since doomed the fanatic experiment. Otherwise, this forthcoming privilege of exercising their own right would never have been theirs. Congress, long coerced by dry propagandists, had to be coerced into courage and reason by unmistakable public resentment.

None the less, let the "lame duck" Congress be given due credit. When finally the public mandate came to be understood, both houses at Washington acted decisively. Naked repeal has been submitted to the states with votes surprisingly large.

The state convention procedure has never been employed in amending the Federal Constitution. Some question has been raised as to whether the states may proceed unaided, or federal action is needed. In either case, Congress has not adjourned, and more than forty states have legislative sessions this year. Consequently, there can be no excuse for long delay. In fact, several important states are already proceeding—and Congress, if it finds any action by itself advisable, should by all means make these state proceedings effective.

Nor is there any reason why any state should refuse to ratify. If any state votes to remain dry after repeal, the Twenty-first Amendment itself gives such a state a constitutional guarantee of federal protection, and the most ardent dry has no right to ask for more than that.

The important fact is that prohibition, as a national policy of government, has been a hopeless failure, inducing corruption and crime, and is from this day irretrievably doomed. Its status now is exactly this—either immediate repeal, or demoralizing nullification.

For in the face of all that has occurred, can any reasonable person suppose that nation-wide prohibition ever again will be "enforced?"

As to the immediate future, President-elect Roosevelt expressed the sentiment of law-abiding Americans. Declaring himself "gratified" that the short session of Congress had executed the mandate of the victorious Democratic party, Mr. Roosevelt urged that Congress act quickly on the question of legalizing beer.

Such legislation will have two immediate and valuable effects. It will provide a lawful temperance beverage instead of poisonous outlaw liquor, and it will divert millions in revenue from the pockets of the bootleggers and the racketeers into the yawning public treasury.

Kline Loses Again

The Mayor Should Relieve the City from Further Embarrassment by Resigning

The Supreme Court found so little merit in Mayor Charles H. Kline's appeal from the verdict of guilty returned against him in the malfeasance case that it refused to review it.

What excuse can Mayor Kline now offer for refusing to resign?

It may be that by legal ruses of one kind or another he will be able to postpone final action on his case for a few months longer. In the meanwhile, unless he sees fit to grant relief himself by resigning, the people of Pittsburgh will continue in the shameful and awkward position of being under the administration of a man convicted of crime and awaiting sentence.

Mayor Kline owes much to the people of Pittsburgh. Gratitude alone, it would seem, dictates that he free them from embarrassment.

Unnecessary Tinkering

The Plan to Modify the Blue Law is Being Imperiled by the Amendments Offered in the Senate.

Unsatisfactory as the Schwartz bill for local option on Sunday baseball is, it is better than the unmodified Blue Law, with its ban on all Sunday amusements. But there is danger that not even the Schwartz bill will become law; for in the Senate efforts are being made to load it down with objectionable amendments.

Thus it is proposed to make it applicable only to Pittsburgh and Philadelphia. The people of other communities with liberal views on Sunday observance — places like Erie and Wilkes-Barre, for example — are naturally and properly opposed to being excluded from the benefits of the measure.

Such unnecessary and undesirable tinkering should be abandoned. By causing postponement of the final vote it threatens failure for the bill

Rusted Steel

There Is Assurance of an Industrial Revival in the Wearing Out of Equipment

Finished steel production in 1932, according to T. H. Gerken, Pittsburgh editor of "The Iron Age," was hardly sufficient to replace losses from rust and wear alone, without considering obsolescence.

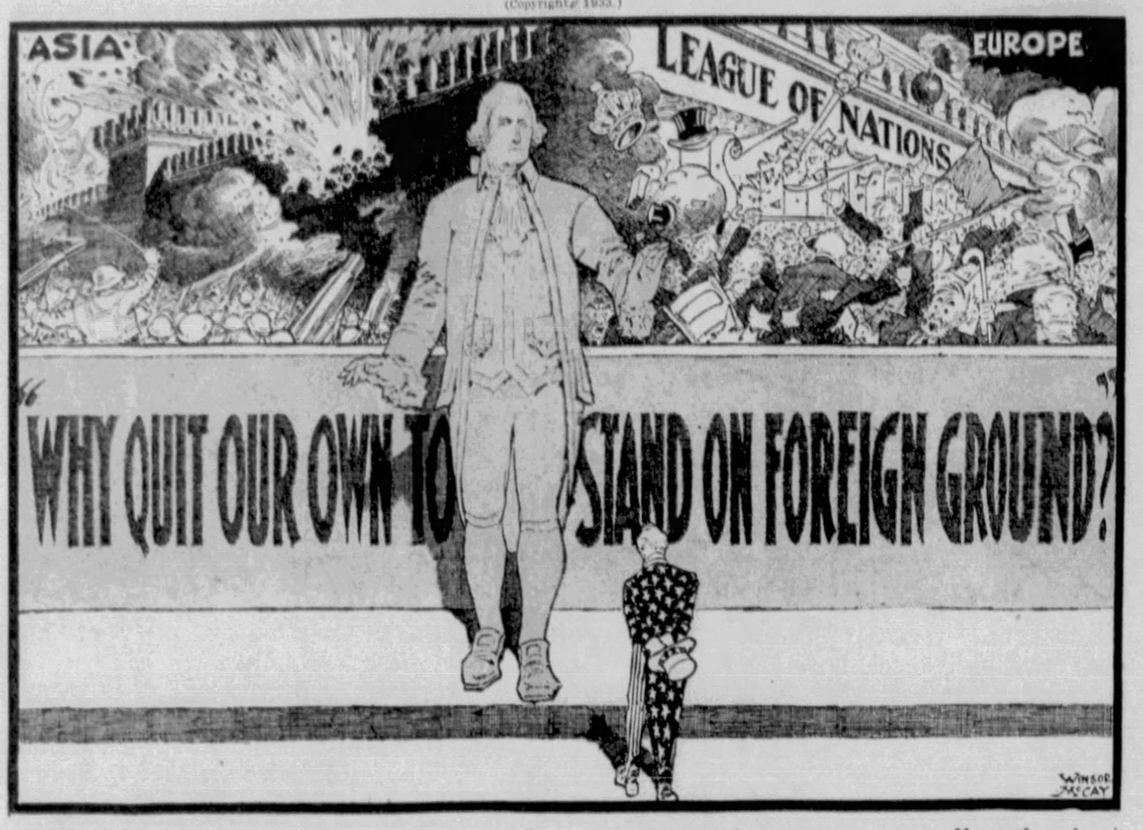
Only 242 pounds of steel was produced for each person in the United States, the lowest per capita output in more than 30 years. In 1931 the production was 463 pounds.

"It is certainly safe to assume," says Mr Gerken, "that any year in which less than 700 pounds a person is produced in the United States will result in a tremendous arrearage for replacements alone."

Here, then, is assurance that an industrial revival cannot be long delayed. Steel equipment will not be permitted to rust away.

Washington's Advice

(Copyright, 1933.)



"Second in importance only to the Constitution," said Albert J. Beveridge of Washington's Farewell Address. In that immortal document the Father of His Country said:

"Against the insidious wiles of foreign influence, I conjure you to believe me, fellow citizens, the jealousy of a free people ought to be constantly awake, since history and experience prove that foreign influence is one of the most baneful foes of republican government. . . .

"The great rule of conduct for us, in regard to foreign nations is, in extending our commercial relations, to have with them as little political connection as possible. . . .

"Europe has a set of primary interests, which to us have none, or a very remote relation. Hence she must be engaged in frequent controversies, the causes of which are essentially foreign to our concerns. Hence therefore it must be unwise in us to implicate ourselves by artificial ties in the ordinary vicissitudes of her policies, or the ordinary combinations and collisions of her friendships, or enmities.

"Our detached and distant situation invites and enables us to pursue a different course. . . .

"Why forego the advantages of so peculiar a situation? Why quit our own to stand upon foreign ground? Why, by interweaving our destiny with that of any part of Europe, entangle our peace and prosperity in the toils of European ambition, rivalship, interest, humor or caprice?

"'TIS OUR TRUE POLICY TO STEER CLEAR OF PERMANENT ALLIANCES WITH ANY PORTION OF THE FOREIGN WORLD."

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—Manhattan has many exponents of modesty in upper brackets the world seldom sees. Leading the list, of course, is Col. Lindbergh. In one of the gently decaying hotels in a side street, reside two scientists of world fame who use a rear exit.

Then, the philanthropist whose sole extravagance is an especially built limousine with a reclining chair. Sciatica makes soft cushions and springs essential. He rides in it only late at night. Eugene O'Neill is not familiar to more than a dozen in the profession he exalts.

Another successful playwright, George S. Kaufman, waits until the house is filled on opening nights and takes a seat in the last row of the balcony, hurrying away before the curtain drops. The most shrinking of the theatrical violets, however, was the late Charles Frohman.

When he passed away, only one photograph could be found. Among the young millionaires Vincent Astor is the most pronounced self-effacer. He dines in out-of-the-way places here and abroad. In many of the big office buildings the directory camouflages the great.

"The Acme Forge Works, Ltd.," is really the mid-town workroom of a well-known novelist. "The Seattle Hook and Eye Corporation" is the amusing pseudonym of a poet. And, speaking of poets, few people have met Edna St. Vincent Millay in public.

* * *

A reverse in modesty was expressed by a nouveau riche, building a castle along the Hudson, who spread his name in large, whitewashed stones across a hillside sweep of his estate. Rennold Wolfe, beholding it, exclaimed: "He's so full of puffs, he thinks he's a railroad station."

* * *

Then there are New York richquicks who use extravagant cars to the theater to signalize wealth. One, wearing a dazzling modernity, is an enormously long town car of solid black, save for the doors to the chauffeur's pit in salmon pink. The passenger seats are upholstered in white ermine and flooded with an indirect glow of heliotrope. Sweet!

* * *

Noel Coward is the most furious cigaret smoker among sophisticates. He begins upon opening his eyes and continues, chain fashion, until he retires, punctuating each meal with several and lighting a dozen or more in every act of the play in which he appears.

* * *

The frothiest lemon-meringue hour in the metropolis is between 11 and 12, when the theatres empty. Electricians have taken the Broadway night and made it a glowing cave, from Herald Square to the Circle. In the bunchy razzle-dazzle of signs is a sunshot of light in every shading —the glare from enameled restaurants, the atrabilious green of the quick photographing parlors, skyhigh clocks in orange discs, sudden advertising searchlights in knife-edge blades, the fierce white from soda fountains and the softer purple, green, red and yellow of the Neons.

* * *

Drug addicts no longer try to hide slavery. A rachitic wreck with topaz-bright eyes grabbed my sleeve in sullen clinch, near the Avon Theater last night, baring an arm hideous with fiery dots. "My head's full of bells, Mister," he whispered. "I used my last shot 24 hours ago." And he looked it.

Nowhere is the patina of despair so visible as on the Rialto. In a few blocks' stroll, I passed Lee Shubert, Charles Dillingham, R. H. Burnside and Jed Harris—all of deservedly great lustre in their field, but now temporarily befogged by havoc of the times. One of this group recently sighed to me: "The trouble is, we live too long."

In a department store wander today I saw what they called the Clifton Webb vest, a buttonless creation that crosses in front and may be buckled into a tight girdle in the back. So that's how they look so wasp-waisted!

* * *

In the same store, a sudden turn plopped me amid the aviary chirp of a woman's fitting room. To a politely firm: "What do you wish?" I blurted a frank: "I wish to get the blazes out of here!" And you should have seen me scoot!

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

There is one thing about every man which you must respect—one thing which you mustn't hurt or you will maim the whole man—

AND THAT IS HIS PRIDE.

Pride is a mysterious thing. I used to think that pride was a form of conceit, and that people were proud in proportion to their achievements. But I was mistaken. I know better now.

Pride isn't conceit. Pride has nothing to do with the things which men have achieved. It is something that is born in us—a fundamental part of our nature, like the body's hunger for food. Perhaps it is the soul's hunger for recognition. Perhaps it is the spirit asserting itself, standing up for itself, in spite of everything.

Whatever it is, we all have it. All men are proud. It doesn't matter who they are, or what they are, or what they have done. They may have done nothing worth while. They may have done everything that is contemptible, weak and bad. Yet they are proud.

Even when men have lost their conceit and self-respect; even when they have forfeited the respect of other men, they are still proud. They still feel that others should recognize and respect that pride.

FOR THEY KNOW THAT THEY ARE BETTER THAN THEY SEEM. THEY KNOW THAT THERE IS SOMETHING IN THEM WHICH IS APART: AND ABOVE THEIR WEAKNESS AND THEIR VICIOUSNESS: SOMETHING THAT NO SIN CAN SOIL AND NO SILLINESS CAN DEGRADE.

They don't know what that something is. They can't define it to you. But they know that it exists—and they are proud of it.

I have known many kinds of men—foolish men, stupid men, bad men, loafers, weaklings, criminals. But I have never yet known a man who was not proud, or any man, save crazy men, who could not have been saved through his pride.

That is why men rotting in poor houses and cells are so bitter. It is not only because they are shut away that they are bitter. They know they haven't played the game according to the rules. They know they've wished a certain amount of grief upon themselves, and they are frequently willing to admit that the sentence is fair. But there's something that isn't fair—something which they feel is horribly unfair—

THE ATTITUDE OF OTHER MEN TOWARD THEM ISN'T FAIR.

OTHER MEN MAY HAVE A RIGHT TO PUNISH THEM, BUT THEY HAVE NO RIGHT TO WHOLLY DESPISE THEM. FOR, NO MATTER WHAT THEY HAVE DONE, THERE IS SOMETHING IN THEM THAT DOESN'T DESERVE CONTEMPT.

They are not bitter because they have failed, or because they are being punished. They are bitter because they are denied respect: because their pride is affronted. To affront a man's pride—that is the bitterest wrong you can do him

Often I think of that, these days, watching the dreadful bread lines. Seeing men grudgingly given dimes. Hearing men lectured because they've been lazy, extravagant.

It is terrible for men to have to stand and hear things like that; terrible to watch the contempt in the faces of those who give grudging charity. What is said is true, and the beggar knows it is true. Still—it should not be said. For there is something in a beggar that is not a beggar There is something in every man which is finer than the man himself—something of which he is proud—something which other men should respect.

A man will do anything for you if you will respect his pride. He may fail you a thousand times just as he may fail himself a thousand times. But on the thousand and first time he will justify your faith in him—and his pride in himself.

But a man will do nothing for you if you despise his pride. He will hate you. He will harm you. And you will deserve it! For you have no right to desecrate that Holy of Holies in any man.

Safety for Savers

Savings Accounts in Commercial Banks Are Entitled To Strict Legal Safeguards

By JULIUS G. BERENS,

Financial Editor, New York American.

THERE IS A vast fundamental difference between savings or thrift accounts in commercial banks and the ordinary business type of deposits.

The commercial depositor invariably has a weather-eye toward possible loans from the institution. He plans constant usage of his account. There are other selfish objects in the ordinary commercial deposit.

None of these concern the individual whose entire objective is the accumulation of savings for emergencies and for requirements of old age.

EVERY POSSIBLE safeguard, moral and legal, should be employed toward the full preservation of such savings.

They must not be subjected to the fluctuations of business, to the constantly shifting sands of commerce and industry.

There should be NO LEGAL DISTINCTION BETWEEN SAVINGS IN THE SAVINGS BANKS AND SAVINGS IN THE COMMERCIAL BANKS.

The latter may be called "thrift" or "special interest" or "compound interest" or any other kind of account. No matter how described they represent simply the savings of individuals who want no part of the daily vicissitudes of business, so far as banking laws can be free from such influences.

WHY, THEN should not commercial banks who seek such savings accounts be subjected to the same severe restrictions as rule savings banks?

It is only logical to demand that such savings accounts in commercial institutions be SEGREGATED completely from the remainder of the bank's commercial accounts.

Such savings should be invested COMPLETELY AND SOLELY in the same type of LEGAL INVESTMENTS as are applicable to savings in the savings banks.

The mutual savings banks have been a bulwark of strength and confidence throughout the depression, principally because they have been restricted to legal investments.

The times oppose any overnight change in the handling of savings or thrift accounts in commercial institutions. It would be foolhardy to anticipate or urge immediate legal requirement that such funds be withdrawn from their present usage and immediately reinvested in legal investments.

THE BANKS bitterly oppose any such reform. Quite obviously, they prefer the privilege of utilizing these savings funds in any field. Under such discretion, savings funds in commercial banks might properly be dictated by the bank's own desires or practices and legally be used to buy foreign bonds, or be advanced for stock speculation.

A reasonable public attitude would demand the INAUGURATION of such segregation of thrift accounts, allowing the banks some years to effect the total transition.

Other reforms in banking will be advocated in subsequent articles.

THE STAR BOARDER

By Winifred Black

"My husband isn't a husband any more, he's just a boarder—and he doesn't pay his board!

"So I'm going to serve notice on him to leave the house and stay away, and not ring me up on the telephone and not to write to me, because landladies don't write to their boarders, unless the boarder pays his board."

So spoke a well-groomed, well-seasoned, middle-aged woman to the judge in a court of a middle western city the other day.

She's always kept a boarding house—ever since she was 22 years old. And a very good boarding house it is, so those who live there insist upon saying.

Pop-overs or muffins or hot cakes for breakfast and real maple syrup and honest honey in the comb and all the good hot coffee you can drink.

Plain, home-made dinners, a good strong soup, a fine roast medium done, vegetables that are flaky and not soggy, and some good old-fashioned dessert like an apple pie with cheese or a cottage pudding with a sauce that is a sauce and not just a little dab of something sweetish.

Good, comfortable beds, in this boarding house, too. And there are reading lights that really let you read and don't make you squint and grimace and work your eyes into a hard knot when you try to see what the headlines are all about.

It takes a brain to run a good boarding house like that, and it takes energy and experience and a great wish to make people comfortable.

The woman who runs this particular house has all these things and she says she isn't going to waste them on a boarder who won't pay his board.

The boarder paid his board all right when the landlady married him, but in about six months after that, she says, he seemed to lose interest in his work downtown.

So he gave up his job and stayed at home and puttered around, adjusting the radio and twisting the locks of the doors back into place, and having the vacuum cleaner—cleaned.

So she told the boarder to go downstairs and sleep in the room where the general utility man had always slept—and the star boarder didn't like that and said he'd be switched if he'd stand it and so the landlady presented him a bill for his board and asked him to settle up—or move.

And now the star boarder will have to move, and somebody else will adjust the radio and have the vacuum cleaner cleaned.

I wonder if he'll hunt for another landlady and another boarding house—and if he does—will he find them?

The Rhyming Optimist

We Who Understand

We are not the only one,
Stricken you and I,
Who have somehow failed to win,
Though our hopes were high.
Ships that sailed, without return,
Cargoes sunk at sea;
These have happened not alone
Just to you and me.

Many, many more there are
Who have fared the same;
Many, many more who seem
Losers in life's game.
Yet we can, if we but will,
Wrest from our defeat,
From the wreckage of our dreams
Something strangely sweet.

We can learn at last to give Cheer and kindly hand
To all those who strive and fail,
We, who understand!
